CASTE.

IN THE SAT YUGA.

The institution of caste was originally based on the natural distinctions of man's temperaments and professions, as it has been said in Bhagavad Gita Chap iv Shloka 13

चातुर्वर्णं मया सृष्टं गुण कर्म विभागम्.

"I have created the (people of) four castes divided according to their qualities and professions"

Historically, the caste was divided in India according to the primitive professions; but philosophically, according to the temperaments of the different classes of the people. The one became to some extent the cause of the other. In a very remote age, when our Aryan ancestors lived in the wilds of the Punjab, they were one united people of one caste, as it has been said in the Shanti Parva of the Mahabharata :—

न विद्येद्योऽस्ति वर्णानां सर्वे ब्राह्मणं हि जगत्
ब्राह्मणा पूर्वं सृष्टं हि कर्मभिर्वर्णतां गतम्

“ There are no (real) distinctions of caste, the whole world is brahma, & e, belonging to God, as it was originally created by Brahma, (the people) have become divided into castes according to their professions ”

In course of time, the occupation of some of them became exclusively sacerdotal, and of others, either military or civil. The sacerdotal class, or Brahmins, were engaged in composing hymns, as the Vedas are, learning them by heart from their tutors, and applying them to the sacrificial ceremonies ; but they were frequently molested by the aboriginal Non-Aryans, who were called by various names, such as Dasyus, Pishachas, Rakshusas, &c., &c. The men of the Khsattriya, or the military caste, therefore, carried on a constant warfare with the aboriginal tribes, in order to protect their brethren, who were engaged in religious and civil duties. Their leaders were called Rajas or the “most prominent ” The civilians were those Khsattriyas, who had no aptitude for military duties.* They occupied themselves in agriculture, tending cattle, and various trades. As they formed the masses of the people, their professions were called Visha, which means "all-pervading," and men who held these professions were called Vaishyas. In the Yajur Veda the Vaishyas have often been called Sajati, or of the "same caste" (with the Kshatriyas.) Thus the Aryas were first divided into Brahmins and Kshatriyas, and the latter were divided into Rajanya "royal caste" i. e., the military pure, and the Vaishyas or the masses holding various professions. Although the Aryas were divided into three primitive castes or barnas, yet practically they were one people, for they intermarried and dined among themselves without restriction, and a man of a lower caste could be promoted to a higher caste and vice versa, as it has been distinctly stated in Manu Samhita—

शूद्रो ब्राह्मणतामेति ब्राह्मणश्चेति शूद्रता
क्षत्रियान्जात मेवन्तु विद्याद्वेष्ट्यात्तथैव च

"A Shudra becomes a Brahmin and a Brahmin becomes Shudra. The same rule applies to one born of a Kshatriya or a Vaishya (parent.)"

Again, it has been said in Mahabharata:

शूद्रोऽपि शीघ्रसम्पन्नो शणवान् ब्राह्मणो भवेत् ॥

ब्राह्मणोपि क्रिया चीनः शूद्रात्प्रत्यवरो भवेत्

“ A meritorious Shudra of good manners becomes a Brahmin.

A Brahmin whose deeds are not good becomes inferior to a Shudra ” ( Ban Parba chap 180 )

IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

WE have numerous proofs in the Shastras that inter-marriages often occurred in the Treta and Dwapra Yugas We shall quote a few passages bearing out this assertion :—

अक्षमाला वशिष्ठेन संयुक्ताधम योनिजा
 शारङ्गी मन्दपालेन जगामाभ्यर्चणीयताम्
 एताया न्यायलोके स्निग्धपक्वष्ट प्रसूतय
 उत्कर्षयोदित प्राप्त स्ते स्वेभर्तुं युगेः शुभे
 (मनु ८ । २३, २४)

‘ Akshamala, who was born of a low caste, was married to Dashushtha (1131) (Similarly) Sharang having been married with Mandpala became honored These, as well as many other women of low origin, became high by the good qualities of their respective husbands ( Manu, Chap IX, v 23 and 24. )

आहङ्गुणेन भर्ता स्त्री संयुज्येत यथा विधि
ताहङ्गुणा सा भवति समुद्रेषेव निम्नगा
(मनु: ६।२२)

"A woman attains the same quality as that of her husband with whom she has been lawfully united, just as a river attains the (saltish) quality of the sea."
(Manu, IX 22.)

अद्धानः शुभां विद्यामाददीतावरादपि
अन्यादपि परं धर्मं स्त्री रत्नं दुष्कुलादपि
स्त्रियो रत्नान्यथो विद्या धर्मः शौचं सुभाषितं
विविधानि च शिल्पानि समादिवानि सर्व्वतः
(मनु २ अ० २३८। २४०)

"Good knowledge may be received with faith from a man of low caste, Param Dharma (the highest religious truths) even from an antyaja (a man of the lowest caste such as Chamar, &c.,) and a good wife from a low family"
(Manu, II, 238.)

"Women, jewels, knowledge, religious truths, purity, fine speech, and various arts may be received from every where."
(Manu, II, 240)

पुत्रराष्ट्रस्य वैश्याया मेकयापि यतात्परः

"After his hundredth son Dhristrashtra begot one son from a Vaishya woman."
(Mahabharat Adi Parba, Chap cxv, 1.)

It might be urged that although in the ancient ages men of higher castes intermarried with women of lower castes, the offsprings of such marriages became anuloma (i. e., of mixed descent), and did not attain to the dignity of the castes of their fathers. We admit that such was the rule, but exceptions were often made, and offsprings of inter-marriages and even of very low origin, and sometime of abnormal marriages, not only attained to the dignity and caste of their fathers, but became more exalted in public estimation than even their fathers, as the following quotations will prove —

हरिणी गर्भं संभूतो ऋषिः शृङ्गो महामुनिः
 श्वपाकी गर्भं संभूतो पिता व्यासस्य सत्तमः
 गणिका गर्भं संभूतो वसिष्ठश्च महामुनिः
 तपसा ब्राह्मणो जातः संस्कारस्तत्र कारणम्
 (मविष्णु पुराणे)

“The great Muni Rishya Shringa was born from the womb of a deer, the excellent father of Vyasa was born from the womb of a Chandal woman. The great Muni Bashistha was born from the womb of a prostitute. They became Brahmins by asceticism.

Purification was in all these cases the cause (of exaltation) " (Bhavishya Puran)

जातो व्यासतु कैवर्त्याः श्वपाक्यास्तु पराशरः
वहवो न्येपिविग्रहं प्राप्तोऽथ पूर्वमहिजाः ॥

(महाभारते वनपर्वणि)

" Vyasa was born from a fisher-woman, Parashar from a Shwupaki (one of the lowest castes much inferior to Sudra) Many others also who were not Brahmans became Brahmans (Mahabharat Banparba)

The Aryas did not only contract marriages with Aryas of different castes, but also with Non-Aryas or Non-Hindus, as will be seen below.—

अर्जुनस्याप्युलूष्यां नागकन्या यामिरावान्
नाम पुत्रोभूत् । मणिपुरपति-पुत्र-याञ्च पुत्रि
का धर्मेण बभूव वाहनं नाम पुत्र मजीजनत् ।

(विष्णु पुराणे ४ स्कंधे २० अध्याये ११)

' Arjuna also begot a son named Iravan by Ulupi, the daughter of a Naga (as the natives of some island in the Bay of Bengal were called) and by the daughter of the King of Manipur (the capital of a tribe of aborigines in the Eastern Bengal), the King having resolved to adopt the son of his daughter as his hen, he begot a son named Babhrabahan "

(Vishnu Paran, 4th part, Chap. xx, 11)

(तथा—३३)

"Said Ulupi to Arjun There is a pannaga born in the race of Airavata, I am his daughter and my name, O King ! Ulupi-Pannagi.

I am enamoured of thee, and beseech thee to do what I desire I wish that thou should'st offer thyself to me, and make me satisfied When the son of Kunti was thus addressed by the daughter of the lord of Pannagas, he did all that he was desired to do considering this to be his duty."

(Mahabharat Adiparba, Chap cxxiv,
v. 18, 31 and 33)

It is well known that Bhima had married a Rakshashi named Hiramba and that Krishna had married the daughter of the king of bears.

In the Aittreya Brahman of the Rigveda, Section 2nd, Chapter XIX, a story is narrated of the son of a slave girl (who was not a Brahmin) having come to join the priests in a great sacrifice. The rishis indignantly turned him out to a desert devoid of water. After sometime when they saw him next they were amazed to find a stream of the river Saraswati flowing near his abode. Considering him to be favored by gods they invited him to their sacrifice and assigned a high Brahmanic function to him.

The authorities quoted above prove conclusively that in the olden days Hindu males were allowed to contract marriages with females of low castes, and the offsprings of such marriages were accepted in society as members of the caste as their fathers. We will now show that males of lower caste also frequently married females of higher caste.

ययातिस्तु भूयद्भवत् उद्यमस्य दुहितरे

देवयानी शर्मिष्ठाया कायं पर्वणी सुवसेने ।

(विष्णु पुराणे ४४वां अर्धे १० नाद्याये १)

There was a Kshattriya King named Yayatī. He had married Devayani the daughter Ushanāsas, (a great Rishi), and Sharmishta the daughter of (the King of Asuras named) Brishparvan "

(Vishnu Puran, 4th part, Chap, X, 1 )

Sakuntala was the daughter of a Brahman whom Dushyanta, a Kshattriya King, had married. Many Non-Aryas had also married Arya females, but the accounts of such marriages would be found more in the histories and traditions of the former than in those of the Aryas, who generally confined their narratives to the great deeds of their own heroes.

We have given sufficient proofs from the Hindu Shastras of the fact that inter-marriages often occurred in the Treta and Dwapara Yugas. We have also shown that in the Sat Yuga the institution of caste was not so rigid as now-a-days. Now, we purpose to show that, in the former Yugas (ages) the Hindus could change their castes. It is said in the Bhagavat —

ब्रह्मो दमस्तपः शौचं कर्त्तव्यं चातिराज्यम् ।
 ज्ञानं दत्त्वा श्रुतार्थं सत्यं च ब्रह्मब्रह्मणम् ॥ २१ ॥
 धैर्यं वीर्यं वृत्तिलोभस्याग आत्मजनः क्षमा ।

 यस्य वक्रचर्णं मोक्तं पुंसो वर्णाभिर्व्यञ्जकम् ।
 वदन्यचापि दृष्टेत् तत्तेनैव विनिर्दिष्टम् ॥ २५ ॥
 (श्रीमद्भागवते ७ स्कन्धे)

"Governing one's mind and organs, asceticism, purity, contentment, forgiveness, simplicity, knowledge, mercy, devotion to God, and truth, are the characteristics of the Brahmin caste. Courage, bravery, patience, vigor, self-control, forgiveness, obedience to Brahmins, protection, are the characteristics of the Kshatriya caste. Devotion to higher spirits, teacher, and God, maintenance of virtue, wealth and objects of pleasure and faith, enterprise, and ingenuity are the characteristics of the Vaishya caste, and humility, cleanliness, faithfully serving his master, worship without the recitation of the mantras, honesty, truth, protection of cows and Brahmins are the characteristics of the Sudra caste. If the characteristics of any caste, described above, be found in a person of a different caste, that person should be designated (in regard to his caste) according to his characteristics (and not according to the accident of his birth)"

(Srimad Bhagavat 7th Book)

We need hardly observe that the above principle of caste-distinction is entirely ignored now-a-days, and its revival only can place the caste-distinction on a true and philosophic basis. Verily, the prophecy of the rishis that, in the Kali Yuga there will be barnashanka (confusion of caste-distinction), has been already fulfilled by the orthodox Hinduism of the present days, which makes the social distinction according to birth instead of according to the disposition or profession of each individual—

एभिस्तु कर्मभिर्देवि शुभैराचरितेस्तथा ।

शूद्रो ब्राह्मणतां याति वैश्यं क्षत्रियतां व्रजेत् ॥ २६ ॥

एतैः कर्मफलैर्देवि न्यूनजातिः कलोद्भवः ।

सर्वोऽयं ब्राह्मणोऽलोके वृत्तेन च विधीयते ।

वृत्तेऽस्मिन्नु शूद्रोऽपि ब्राह्मणत्वं निवेच्छति ॥ ५१॥

(महाभारते अनुशासन पर्वणि १४३ अध्यायः)

(Says Mahadeva) "By these actions, O Devi ! and by meritorious deeds, a Sudra becomes a Brahmin, a Vaishya becomes a Kshattriya. By the effects of these good actions, O Devi ! a Sudra of low origin becomes an ordained and learned Brahmin. It is neither birth nor ceremonies, nor Vedas nor progeny that makes one a Brahmin. Brahminhood is constituted in this world by good Brahminical conduct. If a Sudra is of (Brahminical) conduct he attains Brahminhood "

(Mahābhārat, Anuśaśan Parva, Chapter 143.)

अधर्मे चर्यया पूर्वो वर्णो जघन्य जघन्य वर्णं मापद्यते
जाति परिव्रज्यते । धर्मे चर्यया जघन्यो वर्णः पूर्वं पूर्वं
वर्णं मापद्यते जाति परिव्रज्यते ॥ १० ॥

(आपस्तम्ब धर्म सूत्रे)

By immoral deeds a higher caste becomes lower and lower By moral deeds a lower caste becomes a higher and higher Caste is thus changed

(The law of Apastamba.)

शूद्र योनौ हि जातस्य बहुश्रानुपतिष्ठतः ।
वैश्वत्वं लभते ब्रह्मन् क्षत्रियत्वं तथैव च ॥

आर्जुने वर्तमानस्य ब्राह्मणवर्णमिच्छावते ॥

(महाभारते वनपर्वणि)

‘One born of a Sudra, but bearing good qualities, can become a Vaishya as well as a Kshattriya, and by virtue of rectitude becomes a Brahmin.’

(Mahābhārat Van Parba)

The following quotations will prove that in former Yugas there were many who had changed their castes in accordance with the above principles

It is well known that Vishwa Mittra, a Kshattriya king, had become a Brahmin, and was author of certain Mantras of the Vedas. This fact is related in many of the Itihases and Purans. In the Anushasan Parba of the Mahabharat it is said ,

ततो ब्राह्मणतां जातो विश्वामित्रो महातपा ।

सन्निय सौम्य तथा ब्रह्मवंशस्य कारकः ॥

(महाभारते अनुशासन पर्वणि)

“Then the great ascetic Vishwa Mittra, who was a Kshattriya, became a Brahmin. He was also the progenitor of a tribe of Brahmins.”

There is another narrative in the Mahabharat of a Kshattriya king named Bitharya, having taken shelter in the cottage of a Rishi for fear of his enemy who pursued him with a view to take his life. When the enemy arrived at the dwelling of the Rishi and asked him for the surrender of the king, the Rishi said in reply that all the inmates of his house were Brahmins, and there was no Kshatriya among them. Thus by the change of his caste the Rajah saved his life. The following is an extract from the text of this story with its translation :—

(महामारते अनुशासन पर्वणि ३० अध्याय )

"Said Rajah Pratardana, O Brahmin ! the Ra-jah Bithavya has come here Pray surrender him to me, His sons O Brahmin ! have destroyed the whole of my race By killing him now to day I shall have discharged my duty to my father Bhrigu, the most pious being filled with compassion addressed him
thus There is no Kshasttriya here, all these are Brahmins Pratardana on hearing these true words of Bhrigu, quietly touched the feet (of the Rishi)
and elated (by his success) thus spoke Even so, my lord, I have been undoubtedly successful, as I have by my prowess made this Rajah leave his caste Allow me now, O Brahmin ! (to depart) and think of my well being, I made the Rajah renounce his caste, O descendant of Bhrigu Being then permitted by him Rajah Pratardana went away, as a snake, O Maharaj ! goes away after leaving his poison, and Rajah Bithavya became a Brahmarshi at a word of Bhrigu and also a Brahmahadi. He had a son named Gritsmada who was a second Indra in appearance, whom the Daityas had seized taking him for the real Indra. The best Śruti of that great man is contained in the Rig-Veda. Wherein, O Rajah, Gritsmada became a Brahmachari and a Brahmin-rishi "

(Mahabharat Anushasan Parva, Chapter 30.)

Not only the Rajah Bithavya, alias Haihai, became a Brahmin, but also all his descendants among whom Gritsmada and Sounaka were the most famous, Gritsmada is thus spoken of in the Vishnu Puran:—

सुहोत्रात् सुहोत्रः पुत्रो भूत् । काश लेश गृत्सम-
दास्तस्य पुत्रास्तद्वी भवन् । गृत्समस्य जीनकास्तुर्वर्य्य
प्रवर्त्तयिता भूत् ॥

(विष्णुपुराणे चतुर्विंशे अष्टके आदि १ ।)

"Suhotra was the son of Kshattrabridha. He had three sons Kash, Lesh and Gritsamada, Sounaka was the son (descendant?) of Gritsamada, and he was the originator of the four castes."

(Vishnu Purana Part 4, Chapter 1.)

It appears that at the time of Gritsmada, or when the Śruti of the Rig-Veda relating to

Gritsmada was composed, several Kshattriya kings became Brahmins, for it is stated in Harivans that the heir of Divodas had become a Brahmin Rishi, and Divodas according to Mahabharat was Pratardan's father or contemporary of Bithavya —

दिवो दासस्य दायादो ब्रह्मर्षिर्मित्रयुतं प ।

मैत्रायणस्तत सोमो मैत्रेयास्तुतत क्षता. ॥

(हरिवंशे ३२ अ०)

" The heir of Divodas was the Brahmin king Mittrayu Thence was descended the Maittrayana and the Maittreyas "

(Harivans, Chapter 32)

मुद्गलाच्च मौद्गल्याः क्षत्रोपेता हिजातयो बभूवुः ।

(विष्णुपुराणे ४४<sup>थं</sup>अंशे १६ अ० १६ श्लो०)

" The Maudgalyas were born from Mudgala, and they were Brahmins of Kshattriya origin "

(Vishnu Puran Part 4, Chapter 19, 16)

(विष्णुपुराणे ४४<sup>थं</sup>अंशे १६ अ० २)

" From (the Kshattriya king) Apratiratha was born Kanva, whose son was Medhatithi, from whom became the Brahmins of the Kanwayana clan "

(Vishnu Purana Part 4, Chapter 19, 2)

In the Harivans it is also stated:—

पुत्रः प्रतिरथस्यासीत् कणुः समभवद्गृधः ।

मेधा तिथि सुतस्तस्य यक्षात् कणो भवेद्विजः ॥

(हरिवंशे ३२)

" The son of Pratiratha was the King Kanva, Medhatithi was the son of the latter, whence sprung the Brahmin Kanva "

(Harivans 32)

Again we have the following in the Vishnu Puran —

बृहत्क्षत्र महावीर्यं नर गर्गाद्या भवन्मन्यु पुत्रा ।
 .....गर्गाच्छिनि ततो गार्गाः शैव्याः क्षत्रोपेतादिजा-

" Brihat-kshattra, Mahabirya, Nara, Garga &c.

ed) Shuni Whence became the Gargya, Shainya Brahmins of Kshattriya origin. The son of Mahabirya was Urukhsaya who had three sons, named Traya-runa Pushkarin, and Kapila. All these three afterwards became Brahmins. The son of Brihat Kshattria was Suhotra and of Suhotra Hastin, who was the founder of this (famous city) Hastinapur. Hastin had three sons named Ajamidha, Dvimidha, and Parumidha. From Ajamidha (proceeded) Kanva from Kanva Medhatithi, whence the Brahmins of the Kanvayana clan "

(Vishnu Puran, Part 4, Chapter 19)

Several other Kshattriyas are named in the Mahabharat who became Brahmins

तदाष्टिषिः कौरव्य ब्राह्मणं संश्रितः व्रतः तपसा

(महाभारते शल्यपर्वणि ४० अ० २६; २८ श्लोक)

" There the excellent Rishi Arshiti-sen the Kaurav-ya of famous piety attained, O Rajah ' by great ascetism to Brahminhood. As also the Rajarshi Sindhu-dwipa and the great ascetic Devapi, and there the great Muni, the vigorous ascetic, Vishwa mittra attained to Brahminhood "

(Mahabharat Shalya Parva, Chapter 40, verse 26 and 38.)

(महाभारते आदि-पर्वणि । १३० अ०)

"Those who were born of Khsattriya, such as Vishwa-mitra and others, attained to everlasting Brahminhood —Mahabharat Adi Parba, Chapter 137.

We have given abundant proofs of many Khsattriyas having become Brahmuns in ancient ages. Now we will quote some passages with a view to prove that many of the lower castes also had been promoted to the Brahmin caste, and men of higher castes were degraded to the lower castes.—

नाभागारिष्ट पुत्री द्वौ वैश्यौ ब्राह्मणतांगतौ ।

कुरुषस्यतु कारुषा चत्रिया युद्ध दुर्मदा ।

पृषधोहिंसयिष्व । तु गुरोर्गो जनमजयिः ।

आपाच्छूद्रत्वमापन्ना ॥ (हरिवंशे ११ अ०)

"The two Vaisya sons Nabhag and Arista became Brahmins. The proud warrior Khsattriyas named, Karushas, the sons of Kurusha having killed the cow, O Janameyaya ' of their teacher Prishadhra became by (his) curse Sudras. "

(Harivans Chapter XI.)

अप्रहृत्य तदा द्वे शीवर्तान् तेषां भार्गवः

.....अथ सूर्यमकलयत्

स्वामयित्वा स्वकीये च द्वित्रे विद्वान् प्रकल्पितान्

यामदन्त्यस्तदोवाच सुप्रीतेनान्तरात्मना ॥

(स्कन्दपुराणीय कण्वाद्रि खण्डे उत्तरखण्डस्य)

"The descendant of Bhrigu (Parasuram) then seeing the Kavartas (fishermen) in the country which was destitute of Brahmins, furnished them (the fishermen) with the sacred thread and having settled these converted Brahmins on his own land, the son of Yamadagni then addressed (them) with joyous heart "

(The Skandh Puran)

This shows that a multitude of fishermen who are lower than Sudras were en masse promoted to Brahminhood by a powerful Rishi.

We have alluded before to the son of a slave-girl having become a Brahmin-Rishi; now we give below the Vedic narrative on the subject.

(ऐतरेय ब्राह्मणे २ पञ्चिकायां १८ खण्डस्य)

“ The rishis commenced a grand sacrifice on the bank of the river Saraswati. They disentitled Kava-sha Ailusha from partaking of the Som ceremony with them, saying, “ He is the son of a slave girl, a hypocrite, and not a Brahmin. How will he be initiated among us ? ” They drove him out to a desert, so that he might not be able to drink the water of the Saraswati and thus die of thirst. When he was lying in the desert and burning with thirst, he saw this hymn in praise of the waters, “ Praderatva, &c ” Hence he went to the beloved region of waters, and the waters came within his reach, yea, the Sars-wata surrounded him, hence it is called Parisara (i.e., that which flows) As the Saraswati surrounded him, the rishis said "We know the gods have called him, let us also (therefore) call him" They accordingly sent for him Having called him they also recited the hymn in praise of the waters, "Pradevatra Brahmane natu retu, &c" Hence they attained the beloved regions of waters He goes to the beloved regions of the gods of the waters, he conquers the superior world of the gods, who thus knoweth, and knowing this praiseth the waters

(Aitareya Brahmin 2nd Panchika, Section 19)

From the above story, related in the Aitareya, Brahmin of the Rig-Veda, it appears that Kavasha Ailusha, the son of a slave-girl, was versed in the Vedas and had joined the rank of the Brahmins in a Vedic sacrifice, when the latter enviously and ruthlessly drove him away to the desert, just as some of the whites in the present age are enviously trying to deprive the colored races from enjoying equal privileges with them, but the man was providentially saved and admitted into the community of the highest Brahmins.

We will now quote one or two more examples from the Hindu Shastars of men of unknown persons, or of illegitimate births, having not only been accepted as belonging to the Brahmin caste, but also esteemed as the highest Rishis and authors of the Vedic Smritis.

(हान्दोषीयनिवृत्तिं वदन्तुं प्रपाठोक्तं वदन्तुं शक्यः )

"Satyakama, the son of Javala, thus addressed his mother Java'a.—'I wish to enter the Brahmacharya Ashrama, i. e., to become a student. Please let me know what Gotra (clan) I belong to?' 1.

The mother replied, 'I do not know, dear, the Go'tra (clan) thou belongest to. Being a servant I served many (masters or husbands) and thus I attained thee when I was young, hence I do not know from what Gotra thou hast sprung. My name is Javala, and Satyakama is thy name, so tell (the Acharya) that thou art Satyakama, the son of Java'a' 2.

Having approached Goutama, the son of Haridramat, he thus spoke—'I wish to live by you during my Brahmacharya, O Lord! I approach you (as a disciple.)' 3.

The Acharya said, 'What Gotra, dear, dost thou belong to? The boy said, 'I do not know, Sir, what Gotra I belong to. I had asked (my) mother, about it, and she told me that being a servant she had served many, and she begot me when she was young, hence she could not know from what Gotra I had sprung, and that Javala was her name, and Satyakama mine, Hence (all I know is that) I am Satyakama (the truth-seeker), the son of Javala.' 4.

The Archarya said, "One who is not a Brahmin dares not speak in this wise, (i.e. so truthfully)." Bring wood, O dear! I will lead thee (to the sacred fire for initiation) for thou hast not forsaken the truth. Having initiated him, the Guru selected four hundred lean cows (from among his flock of cattle) and ordered the disciple to lead those cows. The latter driving his herd said 'I will not return before these have multiplied into a thousand,' and he lived out of home (i. e. in the jungle) for a number of years until the cows had multiplied into a thousand."

(Chhandogya-Upnishad, Book IV, Section 4)

The above narrative shows that to speak the plain truth, however derogatory it may be to the honor of the speaker, was during the Vedic age considered to be the great characteristic of a Brahmin irrespective of his birth.

ब्रूहे ! भरदाजनिमं भरदाजं वृद्धयते ! यातो वदुस्त
पितरो भरदाजस्तत्त्ववम् । ३ ।

( विष्णु पुराणे ४ सर्गादे १८ अ० )

"(Said Mamata) Nourish this child O Brihaspati ! as he is born of a man who is other (than his legitimate father). Thou fool ! Nourish him thyself as he is born both of me and thee. As both the parents having said thus (to each other) (left the child where he was) and went away, he is called Bharadwaj (which means "Nourish the child born of other than legitimate husband or born of two.")

(Vishnu Purāṇa, Part IV, Chapter XIX)

The birth of the Great Rishi Bharadwaja is thus narrated:—His mother Mamata was the wife of Utathya, the elder brother of Brihaspati. When she was envious, Brihaspati had connection with her, the fœtus in the womb kicked out the semen of Brihaspati, which fell on the earth in the shape of a perfect child. Mamata and Brihaspati, the natural parents, being unwilling to take care of the child, it was nourished by Providence, and as the last words of the parents when they went away, leaving the child, was 'Bharadwajam' (i.e. Nourish the child born of another,) he was thenceforth called Bharadwaj. This proves that in the ancient time children of even illegitimate birth could become not only Brahmins, but also great Rishis.

Now we will give an example or two of persons of unknown parentage having been admitted into the Hindu Society as members of the higher castes on the following principle:—

मुरासाव नदीनां च पूर्विकाः प्रमवाः क्रिय ।

(महाभारत, भाष्ये पृ० ११०।१६)

"It is often difficult to ascertain the origin of great
"men and rivers."

(Mahabharat, Adi Parva, Chapter CXXXVII, 11)

याचार्थः कस्यसाप्यातो द्रोणः यस्य यतां वरः,

गौतमस्यान्ववाविच मरुत्सम्वाच गौतमः ॥

(तथा १५)

"The great warrior Dronacharya was born from a jar in the family of Goutama while Goutama (himself) was born from a clump of reeds"

(Ibid, 15.)

To be born from a jar or a clump of reeds obviously means that the infants were left in those things by their natural parents. Raja Sagar is also said to have had a large number of sons born from a jar. Bhagiratha, who is said to have brought down the Ganges from her Himalayan abode, is mentioned in the Purans as having been born between two queens without a father. Sita, the famous heroine of the Ramayana, was found by her foster-father Janaka in a furrow of the field, hence she was called Sita, which means a furrow; she is also known as a daughter of the Earth. All these legends prove that there were many famous men and women in the ancient ages brought up in high families of Brahmins and Kshatriyas whose parentage was unknown, yet they were recognised as belonging to the castes of their foster-fathers.

We have stated before how the four Hindu castes were originally formed and how they were often mixed. We will now show, by the following quotations, that caste distinctions did not ever since continue in tact. They had more than once disappeared and were revived again and again.

It may be in the recollection of our readers that we have proved from the Shastars that originally our Aryan forefathers were of one caste, and that caste was called Brahman, or, as it is stated elsewhere, Hansa. In the Bhagavat also it is stated:—

एक एव पुरा वेदः प्रणव सर्व्व ब्राह्मणः
 द्वौ नारायणौ नाम् एकोऽभिर्वर्ण एव च ।
 (श्री भागवते ८ स्क १४)

"Formerly, the syllable Om, which comprises all speech, was the only Veda, the only deva was God and no other was but one fire and one caste"

In course of time some of the Brahmins were obliged to take upon themselves the duty of protecting others by fighting with their enemies, the aborigines, and these were called Kshatriyas, or protectors. The fact of Kshatriya caste having been produced from the Brahmin caste is thus alluded to in the Vedas:-

ब्रह्म वा इदं भग्नं यासीत् एकमेव तदेकं सन् न
व्यभवत् । तच्छब्दो रूपं सत्यं सज्जत् सचं ॥
(उद्दहारण्यकोपनिषद्)

"Before this there was only one Brahm (i. e. Brahman caste) Being not it did not become divided (or multiplied). Hence it created the prosperous form of Kshattra (i. e., the Kshatriya caste)

(Brihadaranyak Upanishad)

तस्मात्सचा त्वरं नास्ति तस्माद् ब्राह्मणः
सन्नित मधस्ता दुपास्ते रावस्तुष्टे ।
सच एव तद्ययो हधाति ।
मेधा सचस्य योनि र्बहु ब्रह्म ॥

तज्जाद्येयमि राजा परमतौ गच्छति ब्रह्मे
वाञ्छतः उपनिब्रूयति सां योनिं ।
न एवं विनास्ति सां यदोनि गच्छति न
यापीवान् भवति ॥

(तृहदारण्यकोपनिषद्)

"Hence there is none greater than the Kshattriya caste. Hence the Brahmins sit below the Kshattriyas in the Raja Suya sacrifice That glory belongs to the Kshattriya only That is (however) the origin of Kshattriya which is (called) Brahma, (i. e., the Brahmin caste)- Hence although the king attains to the highest dignity (among men), yet he eventually takes refuge under the Brahmin caste which is his origin. Whoever destroys the Brahmin caste he destroys his own source. He is, therefore, a sinner

(Ibid )

The Vaishyas, which means "the masses" of the Aryans (or the third caste), were originally Sajatis, i. e., of the same caste with the Kshattriyas, as it is hinted in the following Mantra of the Yajur Veda:—

ध्रुव मसि पृथिवीं दृष्ट्वा ब्रह्म वनितां सप्त वनि
सजातवन्मुपदधानि भ्रातृवत्स्य वधात् ।

(ध्रुव यजुर्वेद अध्याय १, १७ कण्विका)

"O pot.1 thou art steady, make the Earth steady (for me) I put thee (on the fire) for killing our enemies, their who art desired by the Brahmins, the Kshatriyas and the fellow-castes (i. e. Vaishyas).

(The White Yagur Veda, Chap. I, Sec.17.)

In course of time the Vaishyas became distinguished from the Kshatriyas, owing to the differences in their avocations, the former being tillers of the ground, keepers of herds of cattle, and general traders, while the latter confined themselves to the military professions. The Sudras were the conquered Non-Aryans, and the duties of the menial servants were entrusted to them. Manu in Chapter X. 67 calls the Sudras Anarya अनार्य or Non-Aryans.

This is the true historical account of the origin of the castes, but, as in the Rig Veda, there is a hymn called the Purush Shukta, in which it is figuratively stated that "the Brahmin was the mouth of the figurative man whom the gods sacrificed, (i. e., the creation), the Kshatriyas were his arms, the Vaishyas his thighs, and the Sudras were born from his feet, &c., &c.," many of the orthodox Hindus.

taking this statement rather in a literal sense, though, not without altering the construction of the sentence, believe that the four castes were originally produced from the four parts of Brahma's body; but it is absurd to think so and there is no proof of it in the Vedas.

In course of time the original distinctions of caste became obsolete, and its revivals are thus mentioned in the Shastars —

सुहोत्र इहात् सुहोत्र पुत्रो भूत् ।

काश लेश अक्षमदास्तस्य पुत्रास्त्रयो भवन् ।

अक्षमदस्य योनकश्चातुर्वर्ण्यं प्रवर्त्तयिता भूत्

(विष्णु पुराणे ४ सर्वांशे अष्टमाध्याये १)

"Suhotra was the son of Kshattrabridha. He had three sons—Kash, Lesh and Griismada" Sanaka was the son (or descendant) of Gritsinada and he promulgated the institution of the four castes,"

(Vishnu Puran, Part, IV, Chapter, VIII, 1,)

भार्गस्य भार्ग भूमिः चतस्रातुर्वर्ण्यं प्रवृत्ति

इत्येते काश्यपा भूपतयः कथिता ।

(विष्णु पुराणे ४ सर्वांशे अष्टमाध्याये ८)

"Bhargabhumi was the son of Bhargya From him (revived) the (distinction of) four castes. So far have the kings of the Kashyapa clan been enumerated.

(Vishnu Puran, Part IV, Chap VIII, 9)

During the reign of King Ven the caste system had also become almost obsolete, as he was an heterodox king, and did not care for the laws of the Brahmins. The latter, therefore, killed him and placed his son Prithu on his throne. Prithu was a follower of the Brahmins, and he again revived the caste system.

Another time the Kshatriyas were annihilated, and the castes had disappeared, but were reproduced by Brahmins by their intercourse with Kshatriya widows and others, as related in the following passages of the Mahabharat —

तदा नि. क्षत्रिये लोके भार्गवेण कृतं सति ।

ब्राह्मणान् क्षत्रिया राजन्सुतानि न्योभिषक्रन् ॥१॥

ताभिः सह समायेतु ब्राह्मणा संश्रितव्रताः ।

ऋता व्रता नर व्याघ्र न कामान्वावृत्तौ तथा ॥२॥

तेष्वस्य लेभिरे मम क्षत्रियास्ताः सहस्रशः ।

ततः सुपुत्रिरे राजन् क्षत्रियान् वीर्यं वसुदान् । ॥

कुमारांश्च कुमारोश्च पुनः सञ्जायन्ति ब्रह्मणे ।
 एवं तद्वज्राक्षयैः स्रवं सञ्चिदासु तपस्विभिः । ८।
 जातं ब्रह्मवत् वर्मणं सुदीर्घिणा युष्माभिवृतं ।
 बलारोपि ततो वर्णं बभूवुर्ब्राह्मणोत्तराः । ९।
 (महाभारते आ०प० ६४ अ०)

" 5. When Bhargava had annihilated all the Khsattris (males) in the world, the Khsattriya widows went to Brahmins for the purpose of begetting sons 6 The pious Brahmins had intercourse with those widows every month after their monthly courses, but not at other times, nor through lust 7 Through them those Khsattriya women became pregnant in thousands, and they begat very strong Khsattri (children,) 8, both males and females for the purpose of re-multiplication of the Khsattriya race. Thus the ascetic Brahmins produced Khsattris by (the womb of) Khsattriya women, 9, and brought them up religiously, and to a long life Henceforth the four castes beginning with Brahmins came into existence "

(Mahabharat Adi Parva Chap. 64)

In ancient times a man of one caste could become a member of other castes, even temporarily, for we find in the Mahabharat that the Pandavas during a part of the time when they were exiles, and when they went to Panchala for the purpose of marrying Draupadi had joined the Brahminical caste.

The great warrior Karna who was a Kshatriya represented himself to be a Brahmin and remained as such during the time he was a student of Parashurama, as the following sloka of Mahabharat proves-

सतुराममुपागम्य शिरसाभिप्रणम्य च ।

ब्राह्मणो भार्गवो जीति गौरवेणाभ्यगच्छत् ॥

(महामारते शान्ति प० २ अ० १५)

He (Karna) having approached (Parashu Rama) bowed his head and said that he was a Brahmin of Bhargava clan and stood before him with respect

(Mahabharat Shanti Parva II-15)

It can hardly be imagined that the pious Pandavas and Karna who were so strict in the observance of their religious precepts and so very particular in following the rules of morality would speak an untruth without compunction. They must have said so because it was a custom in those days for a man of one

caste to join another caste even temporarily

That Hindu girls were sometimes married by Mlechhas and vice-versa, can be proved from the following incident related in the great Epic poem.

ततः कदाचिद्दिवान् समालम्भः स्वयंवरे ।

कलिङ्ग विषये राजन् राज्ञश्चित्राङ्गदस्य च । २ ॥

ततः स्वयंवरे तस्मिन्संप्रवृत्ते महोत्सवे ।

समालम्भुर्नृपतश्च कन्यार्थं नृपसूतम् । ५ ॥

स्त्रे क्वाचार्थाश्च राजानः ।

प्राच्योदीच्यास्तथैव च । ८ ॥

काचनां गदिन सर्वं युद्धं जाम्बु नदं प्रभा ।

सर्वमाखरं देहाय व्याघ्रादिव बलीकृता । ८ ॥

(तथा ४ अध्याये)

"Then, O king ! at a certain time when the daughter of Raja Chitrangada was about to offer herself in marriage, many a prince had come in the Kalinga territory. 2.

"When the great festival of the swayambara (choosing of husband) had commenced, many kings had come with the desire of gaining the hand of the girl 5

(Among them were) the Mlechha Kings from the east and the north. 8 who had golden bracelets of shining lustre. All of them had white bodies and were strong like tigers. 9"

( Ibid IV )

When Mlechha kings used to come in ancient times to sue the hand of the daughter of a Hindu king it can safely be concluded that there existed then no restriction for Hindus to form matrimonial alliances with foreign nations

---

IN THE KALI YUG

There are two phases of caste system in these days in India. The first imposes restrictions on intermarriages being contracted between members of different castes and the other forbids similarly eating and drinking with members of lower castes. As regards the former we have already shown that in the former yugas i. e., in the ages of rishis and Munis, the marriage restrictions of the present day did not exist. Now we will show by indubitable proofs from the shastras that the food restrictions even of the present day did not obtain in the former ages.

द्विजो वापि वैश्यो वा क्रियावन्तो मुञ्चिप्रतो ।

तद्दृष्टेऽपि दिव्यैर्भोज्यं हव्य कव्येषु नित्यम् ॥

(पराशर सं० ११ अध्याय)

"The twice-born classes should eat at the house of a Khshatriya or a Vaishya who is clean and performs righteous deeds at all festivals whether in honor of devas or ancestors."

(Parasar chap XI)

वर्म्मणान्योन्य भोज्यान् दिक्षास्तु विदितान्वया ।

(व्यास सं० ३ च०)

"The twice-born classes & Brahmins, Khasttriyas and Vaishyas who know their mutual families should piously eat the food of each other "

(Vyas samhita Chap III.)

Far from prohibiting the eating of food of other castes the above ordinances enjoin upon all members of the upper three castes i. e., the Aryans, to eat food of each other. As regards the fourth or the lowest caste, which originally comprised of Non-Aryan tribes, the Hindu law has the following ordinance.

आर्क्षिकः कुक्षमिश्रश्च गोपाक्षी हास नापितौ ।

एते शूद्रेषु भोज्यान्वाचक्ष्यान्नामं निवेदयेत् ॥

(मनुः ४ अ० २५३)

‘ Food of Sudras of the following classes should be eaten—viz—cultivating tenants, friends of one's family, cowherds, menial servants, barbers, and those who offer themselves (to serve )

(Manu, Chap IV 253)

These classes practically include all the present classes of sudras.

Thus it will be seen that the Hindu Law, far from prohibiting, enjoins the eating of food of each other among the four barnas or castes.

Other Hindu law-givers, viz., Yagnyabalkya, Parashar, Yama, Vyasa have in their respective Codes of law confirmed the opinion of Manu that food of certain classes of sudras can be eaten by men of twice-born castes, thus :—

हास नापित गोपाक्ष कुक्षमिश्राश्चैरिष्य

एते शूद्रेषु भोज्यान्ना वद्यात्मानं निवेदयेत् ॥
(पराशर संहिता ११ अध्याये)

"Food of the following classes of sudras may be eaten:—servants, barbers, cowherds, tenants of land, friends of one's family, or one who offers himself (as a friend, or servant)"

(Parashar, Chapter XI)

The above verse also appears in the code of Yama as its second verse.

नापितान्वय मित्रार्थशीरिणो दास गोपकाः
शूद्राणामप्यमीषान्तु भुक्त्वा न्नं नैव दुष्यति
(व्यास सं० ३ च०)

"(One) is not defiled by eating the food of the following classes among Sudras.—barber, friend of one's family, tenant of land, servant, and cowherd "

(Vyas, Chapter III)

शूद्रेषु दास गोपाश्च कुलमित्रार्थशीरिणो
भोज्यान्ना नापितश्चैव वद्यात्मानं निवेदयेत्
(याज्ञवल्क्य १ च० १६६)

"Food of the following among the Sudras can be eaten:—servant, cowherd, friend of one's family, tenant of land, barber and one who offers himself up."

(Yagnyabalkya, Chapter 1. 166)

The ordinances of Hindu law heretofore quoted prove that the four castes of Hindus are allowed to eat food of each other. The following quotation from Manu further proves that food offered by other than Hindus can also be eaten.

एषोऽन्नं सूक्ष्मं फलं मन्त्रमभ्युद्यतस्य च
 सर्वतः प्रतियज्जीवाणामन्नायव दक्षिणाम्

(मनु संहिता ४ अ० २४७ श्लो)

"The following may be accepted from all—fuel, water, roots, fruits, food offered without being asked for, honey, protection and cash presents."

(Manu, Chapter IV. 247)

It might be asked that if there were no restriction of food whatever in ancient times why were the above injunctions needed and why do the modern Hindus generally observe the restriction? The following explanation, however, will solve this apparent difficulty.

The Hindu law-givers had issued edicts against eating the food of sinners and unclean people as follows :—

मत्तं क्रुद्धातुराणाञ्च न भुञ्जीत कदाचन
 केच कौटावपन्नाञ्च पदा स्पृष्टञ्च कामतः
 (मनु संहिता ४ अ० २०७ श्लो)

"(Food of) a drunken, or mad, angry, or sick person should never be eaten, nor that defiled with hair or an insect, or that intentionally kicked."

(Manu, Chapter IV 207.)

भ्रूणघ्ना वेक्षितश्चैव संस्पृष्टश्चाप्युदक्यया
 यतश्चिन्तावस्त्रौढश्च शुभा संस्पृष्ट मेवच
 (मनु संहिता ४ अ० २०८ श्लो)

"(Food) seen by an infanticide, touched by a woman in her courses, tasted by a bird, or touched by a dog (should not be eaten) "

(Manu, Chapter IV 208 )

गवा चान्नं मुपघ्रातं घृष्टान्नञ्च विधेयतः
 गणान्नं गणिकान्नञ्च विदुषाञ्च जगुष्यितं
 (मनु ४ अ० २०९ )

"Food smelled by a cow, cried food,* in particular, food of a mess, food of prostitutes, and food

---

*"Cried food" means food offered with a loud cry on occasions of festivals thus "Let hungry people come forward and partake of this meal."

hated by learned men (should not be eaten")

(Manu, Chapter IV. 209)

अनिष्टस्तस्य पण्डित्य पुंस्यस्या दानिकस्य च
शूक्तं पर्युषितञ्चैव शुद्रस्योच्छिष्टं मेव च
(मनु ४ अ० २११)

"(Food) of one who is blamed (as a great sinner), of a eunuch, of an adulteress or of a braggart, (should not be eaten); nor stale food, nor that which has become sour, nor the residue of a Sudra's plate."

(Manu, Chapter IV. 211)

पिशुनान्तिनोद्यान् क्रतुविक्रयिणस्तथा
शैलपुत्रान्वाद्यान् कृतघ्नस्यान्नं मेव च
(मनुः ४ अ० २१४)

"Food of a wicked man, of a liar, of one who sells his pious deeds, a cheat, a taylor, or of an ungrateful person" (should not be eaten).

(Manu, Chapter IV. 214.)

अवीरास्त्री स्वर्णकार स्त्रीजित ग्राम बाजिनां
यस्त्र विक्रयि कर्म्मार तन्तु वाद्य श्वजीविनाम्
(वाचवस्त्राय १ अ० १६३)

"(Food should not be eaten) of a woman who has neither brother nor husband (to protect her), of a Gold-smith, of a man governed by his wife, of a priest, of a vendor of arms, of a black-smith, of a weaver, or of a dog-keeper "

(Yagnyabalkya, Chapter 1 163).

It seems rather unreasonable to forbid food of artizans, but it was probably due to their being considered men of low professions. But it is significant that food of such Brahmins was also forbidden as were mercenary priests, professions nowadays considered respectable.

परपाकं निवृत्तस्य परपाकं रतस्य च

अपचस्य च भुक्त्वा कं दिवसान्द्राचणं चरेत् ।

अपचस्य च यद्दानं दातुं चास्य कुतः फलम्

दाता प्रतिग्रहीता च हो तो निरव गामिनौ ॥

"A twice born man who has eaten food of one who does not provide food for others, or of one who lives on the food of others, or of one who does not give alms, must expiate his sin by the Chandrayana rite. The charity of one who does not give alms is useless, for both the giver and the receiver go to hell "

It will be seen from the foregoing quotations that food restrictions were only imposed with the object of preventing association of respectable men with sinners, or unclean, or low persons. In course of time, pride and vanity made these restrictions encroach too much upon freedom, so that those who considered themselves to be of higher castes, or purer, avoided the food of their supposed inferiors. The relic of the good old custom, however, continued in the Punjab, the original abode of the Aryas, where all Hindus up to this time eat food of each other without restraint. Food of others than Hindus would also have been acceptable had it not been for the forbidden meat in which the foreigners indulge.

Appendix 1

MARRIAGE OF HINDU WIDOWS IS ALLOWED BY THE SHASTRAS.

The ancient sages of India were called Rishis or seers, Munis or thinkers, because they "saw" the principles of the Hindu laws and "thought" over them. Among the present generation of Hindus, on the contrary, there are very few who reason upon their laws. In fact, it is generally considered an act of infidelity to do so. The generality of the orthodox people in every religion attach more importance to the letter of the law than to spirit; but strange to say, the Hindus, in many cases, follow neither the letter nor the spirit of their laws, but blindly follow the custom handed down to them by their Immediate ancestors.

The legality of widow-marriage is not only in accord with the spirit of the Shastras, but is established by the direct injunction of the Dharma Shastras, as first pointed out by the celebrated Pandit Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagar of Bengal, then by Vishnu Shastri of Bombay, and Pandits in other parts of the country, yet the majority of the orthodox Hindus still doubt that there are authorities in the Shastras in favor of it. We, therefore, need make no apology to our readers for giving here a few quotations with their translations on the subject.

The following passage is from the Dharma Shashtra, or laws of Parashara Rishi, which are intended for the Kali Yuga, the present iron-age:—

नष्टे नृते प्रव्रजिते ह्यीवेश पतिते पतौ ।
पञ्च स्थापन्तु नारीणां पतिरन्योविधीयते ॥

"If the husband deserts (his wife), or if he dies, retires from the world, becomes impotent or fallen (religiously) ; in any of these five cases of affliction, (the wife) is allowed (to get to herself) another husband "

The same passage with further amplification occurs also in the Narad Sanhita, thus:—

नष्टे नृते प्रव्रजिते ह्यीवेश पतिते पतौ ।
पञ्च स्थापन्तु नारीणां पतिरन्योविधीयते ॥

षष्ठी वर्षाण्य पेक्षित ब्राह्मणी प्रोक्षितं पतिम् ।
 अपमृतातु चत्वारि परतोऽन्यं समाश्रयेत् ॥
 सञ्चिन्वा षट् समाश्रितेद्दमृता समाश्रियम् ।
 वैश्या मृता चत्वारि देवर्षिलितरावयेत् ॥
 नगृह्यावाः क्षत काष्ठ एष प्रक्षितयोषिताम् ।
 जीवति श्रुवमायेतु स्यादैष द्विगुणो विधिः ॥

"If the husband deserts (his wife), or if he dies, retires from the world, becomes impotent, or fallen (religiously), in any of these five cases of affliction, (the wife) is allowed (to get to herself) another husband.

The wife of a Brahmin should wait for eight years for her husband who has left home, but, if she has not begotten any children she need only wait for four years and then take to herself another (husband)

The wife of a Kshattriya should wait for six years but one who has not got children for three years only.

The wife of a Vaishya, if she is with children, should wait for four years, otherwise for two years only.

No such time is fixed for the wife of a Sudra (who can marry another husband whenever she likes) if her (first) husband has gone away.

The time mentioned above should be doubled

if the wife learns that her first husband is alive.

The following passage occurs in Manu:—

वा पत्यावा परित्यक्ता विधवा वा स्वयेच्छया ।

उत्पाद्येत्पुनर्मुखा स पुनर्मव उच्यते ॥

“ If that woman who has been divorced by her husband, or who has become a widow, marries again and begets a child, that child is called punarbhava, i. e. ‘one born of a woman married again’ ”

Yagna Balkya, the great Hindu law-giver, next to Manu, says:—

अद्यता च द्यता चैव पुनर्मु संस्कृता पुनः ।

“ If a woman, whether she has lived with her former husband or not, marries again she is called punarbhva i. e., married again ”

There is a Shruti of the Vedas also on this subject, viz. :—

उदीर्ष्वा नार्यमि जीव क्षोभमिता सुमेतमुपशेष एहि ।

इक्ष्वाग्रामस्य द्विषीक्ष्वमेतत्पुर्णनिष्कर्ममि कथ्यस्व ।

“ O woman! Thou art lying by the side of your dead husband. Get up, come to the world of the living, and be the wife of that second husband who may take hold of thine hands i. e. marry thee.”

This advice used to be offered to a widow in the Vedic ages, when her husband was laid on the funeral pyre, and she used to lie by his side. It is evident from the text that, in the Satya Yuga, or the golden ages, widows were not consigned to the fire with the corpse of their husbands, as it became unfortunately the fashion in latter days till the cruel custom was abolished by our benign Government, but were advised religiously by the priests to marry another husband.

We pray to God that the golden age may return to rescue the millions of Hindu widows from the thralldom of tyrannical custom.

CHILD-MARRIAGE.

CHILD MARRIAGE is one of the two great evil institutions which have been the ruin of this country. Something might be said in favour of caste, for it is maintained by a class of intelligent and educated persons, with some show of reason, that the institution at one time did India some good towards the improvement of her arts and manufactures; but nothing could be said in defence of child-marriage. This institution, more than any other, has contributed to the physical degeneracy of the Indian people and their extreme poverty. That physical degeneracy and poverty alone are factors, powerful enough to convert a manly, brave, independent, intelligent and noble nation into a race of cowardly, slavish, obtuse and selfish men, must be evident to all who can think for themselves.

An institution which produces, or contributes to the production of, so many evils of such gigantic magnitude, might very fairly be called a monster-evil, and a volume of more than a 100 pages could be written on the subject without exhausting it, particularly because the question of child-marriage involves not only that of religious sanction, but also that of religious injunction. We shall deal with the subject briefly, for the space at our disposal would not admit of an exhaustive discussion of the question.

We will first take up the historical aspect of the subject. Did child-marriage exist in ancient India? is the question we propose to answer in the first place. It would be rash to say that child-marriage was a thing unknown in ancient times in this country, but this much could be said with perfect truth that even if it did exist, it never existed in ancient India as an institution enjoined, or even sanctioned, by religion. It must be understood that we are here referring to the Aryan races of the country, for in ancient Indian literature, which is almost a purely Aryan one, we find little or no record of the manners and customs of the non-Aryan races unless the caricatures we find of them in the works left by their conquerors be called by that name. So far as the male population were concerned, it can be said without any fear of contradiction that even early marriage, not to speak of child marriage, did not exist among them, for the rule is clearly laid down in the Shastras that a twice-born should devote himself to instruction and study under a Guru till at least his thirty-sixth year. It is on the completion of this Brahmacharyashram or student-life that he was enjoined to marry and enter into Grhasthashram. Thus, it must be evident that, in ancient India, it was wrong, if not impossible, for a twice-born to marry before he was six and thirty years old. We do not know on what grounds our Rishis fixed the minimum of marriageable age in men at thirty-six; but, whatever their reasons, there can be no manner of doubt that the age fixed by them is even higher than what modern science declares to be the minimum of marriageable age in men. Medical Science has proved beyond question that before a man has attained to his 24th or 25th year his physical constitution does not reach its full development. It is very probable that our forefathers knew this scientific truth, for the fact of the minimum limit of marriageable age in men having been fixed at a higher limit is not, on any other assumption, capable of satisfactory explanation.

Now, as to the marriageable age of women in ancient India. The Shastras are not so unanimous on this point. The truth seems to be that though there was no absolute bar to child-marriage in women, as there was in men, it was nothing like an institution, at all events among the Aryan races of the country. But it ought, in justice to the non-Aryan population of India, to be observed in this place that it is extremely improbable that there was child-marriage among them, for even at this distance of time it can be seen by any body with eyes in his head that the aboriginal races of India dwelling on our hills and mountains, who have never come in contact with the Aryan settlers of the plains, have no child-marriage among them. Men, among them, marry when they reach manhood, and women when they reach womanhood. Child-marriage in women, though not absolutely prohibited, had not, it is certain, the countenance or sanction of the "men of light and leading" in ancient India. Here is a well-known Shloka on the subject —

कन्यायैवं पाञ्चनीया मिश्रणीवाति यवतः ।

इवा वराव विदुषे जनद्वयमन्विता ॥

The Shloka means.—"The daughter is also to be reared up and educated (by the father) in the same manner (as the son), and given with jewels and money (dowry) to a learned bridegroom" Now, it has been seen that in ancient India it was the duty of every twice-born to study the Shastras under his Guru till at least his thirty-sixth year, and, if it was the duty of every father to educate his daughters also "in the same manner," it must be evident that there could have been but very rare instances of early marriage of girls, not to speak of their marriage in childhood. Here are two more well-known lines :—

पञ्चात पतिमर्त्याहमञ्चातपतिसेवनाम् ।

नोहास्येत् पिता बाला मञ्चातपत्यञ्चनान् ॥

The meaning runs —“The father should not give in marriage his daughter who does not know the respect and honour due to the husband, who has no knowledge of the duty she owes him, or who is ignorant of the laws of religion.” Now, our readers require no prophet to tell them that a young woman of even twenty summers could know but little of the laws of religion.” It must, thus, be evident that the Shastras are against early marriage, not only of men, but also of woman. The Shlokas on the subject ascribed to a Rishi, no doubt, support early, nay even child-marriage, but it has been held by a scholar like the late Pandit Swami Dayanand that they are interpolations of a recent date made by some interested Pandit. And the Swami's view seems to be very reasonable. The Shlokas we have quoted are of the highest authority and of a very ancient date, as any Sanskrit scholar will say, and no end of such Shlokas could be quoted, while but very few verses could be quoted in support of child-marriage. In the Svayamvara system we have an evidence of the truth of Swami Dayanand's view above indicated, Shakuntala, Damayanti, Indumati, Draupadi and others in fact, almost all women famous in ancient Indian history or literature—chose husbands for themselves, and that in the midst of assemblages of kings and other potentates. And these women, whose names are honoured in every Hindu household to this day, are described as ladies of “killing” beauty, very fair education and charming accomplishments. There can, thus, be little doubt that the detestable Shlokas ascribed to Dharm Shastars, were the work of some interested Pandit of no distant past. The Shlokas themselves offer internal evidence of this. They say that the man who keeps his daughter unmarried after she has completed her tenth year, and his ancestors up to the fourteenth degree, drink of her Rajas or monthly discharge. Now, this kind of gross indecency could not have been perpetrated by any great Hindu law-giver. We, therefore, maintain that such Shlokas should find no place in the Dharm Shastars, and that the Hindu scriptures are against child-marriage aye, even early-marriage, and since in ancient India, as in modern, the Shastras were the guide of the people, it must be evident to all thinking men that child-marriage, though not absolutely proscribed was an institution abhorred by our forefathers. Sushrut, the greatest of ancient Indian medical men, says (we wish we had space enough to enable us to reproduce his verses on the subject in this place) that children born of girls below sixteen years must be either vikalanga a person one or more of whose limbs are out of order, : e, (incapable of performing their functions), or very weak and short-lived. This is, again, another instance of the wisdom of our ancestors, for Western science has only recently come to the conclusion that girls should not marry before at least two or three years have elapsed after the establishment in them of the monthly discharge. Thus, for the various reasons given above, it can be safely asserted that if child-marriage or even early marriage, at all existed in ancient India, it was confined to very few people, and existed in spite of the teachings of the Shastras.

Appendix 3.*CHILD-MARRIAGE.

Some people hold Manu responsible for the origin and continuation of the custom of child-marriage, for it was Manu, who according to him laid down that a girl of 8, 9 and 10 years was fit for marriage. We admit that Manu enjoined the marriage of girls before they reach the age of puberty, but he and other Hindu authorities have also allowed the marriage of girls at an advanced age under certain circumstances. For instance, we can do no better in support of our position than to refer the reader to the fact that Manu married his own daughter when she had arrived at her mature age. We see no reason why the latter permission, supported by his own example, should not be availed of by the Hindu fathers without violating the religious injunctions. At the same time we may mention parenthetically that early marriage of boys is entirely opposed to the spirit of the Shastras, the earliest age of the marriage of a man is declared by Manu to be twenty-four. We quote below some of the authorities in support of the marriage of girls at an advanced age :—

काममानव्याप्तिष्ठेद्दृष्टव्येकव्यर्तुमत्यपि ।

नचैवेनां प्रवच्छेत्तु गुणहीनाय कर्हिषित् ॥

(मनुः अध्याय ८।८८।)

"A girl may remain at (her parent's) house, even after menstruation, till the end of her life, but she should never be given (in marriage) to a man, destitute of good qualification"

(Manu Chapter IX, 89.)

This ought to convince an orthodox Hindu that there is in reality no sin in keeping a girl unmarried even when she has become a woman

अमाजूरिवदिषीः सचासती समानाद्वा

सदसञ्जामिषि भगम् ॥

(ऋग्वेद मंडल २ अ० २ सूक्त १७ मंत्रं ७)

"O Indra ! as unmarried girls who become old at the house of their parents ask for the supply of their wants to the elders of their house, so do I also pray for the supply of my wants to thee"

(Rig Veda Mandala II, Chapter II, Hymn 17, Mantra 7)'

This old Mantra of the Rig Veda proves that in the Vedic age or the Satya Yuga girls often used to remain unmarried at the homes of their parents till they became fully grown up ladies, and this was allowed by the Vedas. Why should not the same permission be availed of by the parents and the girls now-a-days, so long as a good match is not secured?

MARRIAGE.

---

WE purpose in this article book to show the injurious customs prevalent in this country in connection with that great event of human life called "Marriage," so that our readers may see why their reformatations are urgently needed.

One of the greatest evil customs is that the parties in the marriage are never allowed free choice, except in the case of the man who is independent, and who has not his parents or guardians living. There is, we admit, at the outset, some reason in this custom, and that is, that young persons are often liable to be so overcome by passion, or unexperienced, as to be unable to make as good and prudent a choice for themselves as their more experienced guardians would make; and that is, why even in the civilized countries, where free choice has full play, matches frequently prove unhappy, and numerous divorce suits are instituted as the result. But on the other hand, we see that the evil results of compulsory marriages are so obvious and so preponderating that, were the people not slaves of custom, such marriages would have been long ere this events of the past. To remove, therefore, the evils attending both the systems, it is obviously desirable that in every marriage, there should be, as far as possible, the free choice of the parties personally concerned, and the sanction of their parents or guardians, before a marriage is celebrated. But suppose there be difference of opinion in regard to a match between the parties and their guardians. This can only be in two cases, (1) when the parties themselves are unwilling to join in wedlock, and (2) when they are willing, but their guardians, or the guardian of one of them, does not agree. In the first case, it is hardly necessary to explain why the marriage should not take place, while in the second case, the parties ought to wait till they gain sufficient experience of the world before they form the marriage contract contrary to the wishes of their guardians or one of the guardians; the laws of civilized nations, therefore, generally lay down a limit of age, both for the man and woman before which they should not act in opposition to the wishes of their guardians, for instance, in the case of marriage under Act III of 1872, this limit has been fixed at the age of 21. This is the best custom, and our fellow-countrymen ought to adopt it, if they wish to avoid the unhappy results of compulsory marriage on the one hand, and a hasty marriage on the other. Our country is teeming with misery owing to the non-observance of this good custom. Early marriage which has been gradually introduced would have been impossible if there were a law that no marriage would be valid, in which the principle of free choice was disregarded. The case which cropped up in Bombay the other day, in which Mr Justice Pinhey gave a decision based on enlightened principle which our Conservative contemporaries are unwisely attacking, and thousands of other cases resulting in polygamy, desertion, adultery, silent, bewailing, which have become matters of every-day—occurrence, and are therefore, scarcely noticed by the public, are owing to the want of such a law. Hence, every patriot and true well-wisher of his nation ought to put his shoulder to the wheel of reformation in this matter. It is well-known that the custom of swayamvara in which a girl was allowed to chose her own husband prevailed in the good olden days. The most renowned and happy marriages of Sita, Damayanti, Rukmini, Draupadi, &c, took place on this principle. Hence, it would not be contrary to the Shastras to revive the custom of free choice. Some people might argue that in certain Shastras early marriage is enjoined on the ground that if a girl is not married before she menstruates, her parents will get her menses for drink in the next world ! They ought to know that every precept of Hindu Law has an object in view, and that the punishments mentioned are often terrifying than real. In this case, the object is only that the parents may not be negligent as to the necessity of securing a good match for their daughters, for if it were not so, the following ordinances of Manu would have no scope :—

कामनामरणासिष्ठेदृश्ये कन्यसुं न त्वपि ।
 न चेवेनां प्रयच्छेत्तु युग्य हीनाय कर्हिचित् ॥
 अनुः २ । ८८ ।

“A girl even after menstruation may rather remain for her whole life time at (her parent's) home, she should never be given to a man who is not qualified "

Manu IX, 89

त्रौण्विवर्षाण्युद्दीक्षेत कुमार्यृतुमती सती ।

उद्धन्तु कालादितस्माहिन्देत् सदृशं पतिं ॥

मनुः ८ । ८० ॥

" A girl should wait for three years after her menstruation After this period she may choose a suitable husband (for herself) "

Manu IX, 90

अदीयमाना भर्तारमधिगच्छे यदि स्वयम् ।

नेन किञ्चिद्वाप्नोति न च यं साधिगच्छति ॥

मनुः ८ । ८१ ॥

" If a girl who has not been given to husband (by her parents or guardians) contracts a marriage her self, she does not commit any sin, nor to whom she marries "

Manu IX, 90

Thus it is evident that the principle of free choice has not only the sanction of reason, but also of Hindu Law

The next evil is the parda system, and consequent want of education of females, for unless the parda system is removed, at least to the necessary extent, and girls are educated, they cannot have the chance of making a free choice. The chief plea of the advocates of the pardah system is that it preserves chastity more than the "liberty system." We have stated in our last issue, that we do not advocate unlimited and clandestine intercourse between opposite sexes. But there should at least be so much liberty given to females that they may be able to attend public female schools, and associate with men and be allowed to converse with them in social gatherings and on public occasions, as the Hindu ladies in the Deccan do. No one can say that Hindu ladies in the Southern Presidencies are for that reason less chaste than those in the Bengal Presidency. Europeans give balls, dinners, &c, to promote social intercourse, we cannot introduce the custom of balls among us, but on occasions of dinners and numerous other social gatherings, it is desirable that, at least among the social reformers, native ladies and gentlemen should meet and converse with each other, and allow children of both sexes to do the same. This system, while avoiding the abuse of extreme liberty and clandestine interviews, will make the members of the native community familiar with each other, and give them opportunity of contracting matrimonial alliances on the principle of

of free choice.

Another evil custom which is a bar in the way of happy marriages and of making the natives a nation is the restriction of choice among a limited number of Jatis or subcastes. We see no reason why such Hindus as are prepared to make reformatations up to the extent allowed by the Shastras should not avail themselves of the privileges allowed by the Hindu law.

Manu says—

शूद्रैव भार्या शूद्रस्य शास्त्रावविद्य कृते ।

तेषु स्त्रावैव राज्ञश्च तासु स्त्रा वाग्रजन्मनः ॥

मनु. ३।६३ ॥

" A Shudra only can be the wife of a Shudra, or one of a menial caste. The Vaishya or a man of the industrial and trader's caste can according to the law, have a Shudra or a Vaishya for his wife. The King (or a man of the military caste) can have a wife from both the foregoing and his own caste. The first born (or a man of the sacerdotal caste), can have (for his wife) a woman of the foregoing three and his own caste "

Manu III , 13

Although the ancient Hindu Law allowed a Shudra wife to a man of a higher caste, yet as Shudra was Non-Aryan, Manu deprecated matrimonial alliances between that caste and one of Aryan blood. But when such mixed marriages did take place, he declared the following law as to the caste of the offspring —

जातो नार्यामनार्यं वामार्यादार्यो भवेद्गुणैः ।
जातोऽप्य नार्यादार्याचारनार्य इति निश्चयः ॥

मनुः १० । ६० ॥

“(A son) born of a Non Aryan woman by an Arya becomes Arya by (his good) qualifications But (one) born even of an Aryan woman by a Non Aryan is surely Non-Aryan ”

Manu X., 67

The castes mentioned above are, however, fixed by qualifications and not by birth only, for says Manu -

शूद्रो ब्राह्मणतामेति ब्राह्मणयेति शूद्रतां ।
क्षत्रियाज्जात मेवन्तु विद्या दैश्यात्तथैव च ॥

मनुः १० । ६५ ॥

“A Shudra attains to Brahmanhood and a Brahman to Shudrahood, Similarly (one) born of a Kshatriya or of a Vaishya ”

Manu X., 65.

Appendix 5 D I V O R C E.

संवत्सरं प्रतीक्षेत दिपन्ती, योषितं पतिः ऊर्ध्व ।

संवत्सरात्त्रिंशं दायं हर्त्वा न संवसेत् ॥

मनु ६।७७ ॥

"Should a woman hate her husband, the latter should wait a year for her, after which he should take off her ornaments, &c, and no longer cohabit with her "

—Manu Chap IX, 77

वन्ध्याष्ट मेधिवेद्याब्दे दयमेतु मृत प्रजा एका-
दये स्त्री जननी सदास्वप्रियवादिनी ॥

मनु ६।८१ ॥

"The husband of a woman who has been barren for seven years may re marry, of one whose children habitually die may remarry in the tenth year, or one who gives birth to female children only, in the eleventh year, but the husband of a quarrelsome woman may re-marry at once "

—Manu Chap IX, 81

The above proves that in certain cases the husband is at liberty to divorce his first wife and marry another

No, as regards the right of woman to divorce her husband and re-marry, we have quoted in our last issue a passage from Parasar, allowing a woman to re-marry during the life-time of her husband in five cases It is obvious that such marriages could not be contracted without divorcing the first husband, we Will now quote a Sruti from the Athar-

va Veda on the same subject—

या पूर्ववतिं वित्वा शान्यं विन्दते परमपञ्चोदनं च
तावज्ज ददाती न वियोषत । समानं लोको भवति
पुनर्भवा पर पतिः योजं पञ्चोदनं दक्षिणा ष्यो- तिषं ददाति ॥

अथर्व वेद ८ । ५ । २७ ॥

"I a woman, who after having know one husband, marriage another, gives in charity, in company of her husband, Apjanchowdan (a kind of food), she will never be separated from her second husband, she, after death, attains to the same heaven as her second husband if the latter also gives money as well as Apjanchowdan in charity."

Atharva Veda, IX n 27 and 28.

The above proves that divorced Hindu wives re married in the ancient time

Our own views may differ in many respects from those of Manu and other law-givers Yet there is no reason why we should not give out misunderstood by the Manu and other law-givers Yet there is no reason why we should not give out the views of the ancient Risis when they are misunderstood by the Modern Hindus.

Appendix 6

REFORM FROM WITHIN.

ALTHOUGH it is one of our principles that what is good should be accepted from every where, yet for those who cherish a national pride and are averse to make any social reform at the example of foreigners, we can point out that as our country can meet all the physical wants of our nation, even if it be cut off from commercial relation with all other countries, so it has all the examples of the necessary social and religious reforms within itself

Freedom for both sexes is the first means of reform. The Hindustanis, the Bengalis, and to some extent the Punjabis, follow the evil custom of keeping their ladies concealed within the Zenana, but the women of the Deccan and the Himalyan hills enjoy as much freedom as is necessary for their physical as well as mental development. If the former wish for reform from within, they can easily follow the example of the latter in this respect. We know several of our up country friends, when they are in Bombay or Madras with their families, would give their ladies full liberty to drive in open carriages, to walk with unveiled face in the bazar, and to attend public meetings, but they dare not do so when they are in their native provinces. So the reason why they grudge female liberty is not that they conscientiously believe it to be wrong, but that they have not the moral courage to bear the taunts of the custom-worshippers for introducing a novel custom, although that custom is quite a national one, and which their ancestors, who lived in the former yuyas, followed, and which their brethren who live in the neighbouring provinces still adhere to. We would, therefore, exhort these friends to be more manly, and to fear not to make a little sacrifice for the good and liberty of their better halves and their future generations. To those who really dread evil result from female emancipation, we would earnestly suggest a sojourn in the Deccan together with their families so that they may have the means of personally witnessing the advantages of freedom, and of thus allaying their fears. It is obvious that unless women in any society enjoy sufficient freedom with, of course, necessary safeguards, they cannot have sufficient education, or that training which would make them strong enough to resist temptations, and to be able to lead life, if circumstance compels them to do so, without much dependence upon their male relatives.

The Deccanese and the Hindustanis are too much enslaved to the superstitious customs of food restrictions. They would be induced to shake off their prejudices in this respect to some extent if they sojourned in the Punjab, where the Hindus of all the four Varnas freely partake of food cooked even by a Shudra. This freedom is not only maintained by the example of the Sikhs or the teachings of Gura Govind Singh, but is also allowed by the Dhiram Shastras or Hindu Law from which we have given sufficient quotations in a previous issue. We know that Hindus are nowhere entirely free from food restrictions, but the customs of the Himalayan Buddhists and the ordinance of one of their principal avatars, which is reverentially followed at the Jagannath kshetra by even the highest of the Brahmins, should be considered standing examples for those enlightened Hindus who would be free from the food prejudices. But some might say cui bono, what will the Hindus gain by getting rid of the custom of food restriction? Our reply is, it will tend to make them, a united nation, and, share all those advantages which our ruling race possesses by travels to, and sojourn in, other countries, nay, it will restore to them one great element of humanity of which they have been deprived by their superstitious custom, they will learn true hospitality and draw closer to mankind in general

than they are at present

As the butcher minces the carcase of a slaughtered animal into innumerable pieces, so has the caste system, after taking away the life of the Hindu nationahty, divided it into innumerable sub-castes and clans which cannot contract matrimonial alliances among themselves. That it was not so in the ancient ages we have proved by ample quotations from the shastras in our series of articles headed "Caste " Although the Hindus throughout the country have given up the old practice of inter-marriage, yet the hill tribes of the Himalayan range have preserved that freedom to some extent, not to say of the thousand of cases of free unions or illegitimate marriages which constantly take place between members of different castes. At any rate, the Hindus can never be a united nation until all the unnessary marriage restrictions are removed, and every person has a free choice to select his, or her, partner for life from any caste, and contracts a regular public, instead of a clandestine, marriage

Marriage and food restrictions are the two fangs of the Serpent of caste; strike them out and the caste system becomes at once harmless Natural caste prevails in all nations of the earth, and we are not opposed to it. Let the true caste principles of the Shastras be observed by all means, that is to say, let those persons be called Brahmins who really follow sacerdotal advocations, or are solely engaged in learning, teaching and preaching; those who are engaged in military or political duties be called Kshatryas, traders merchants, artizans, manufacturers, cultivators, farmers, in short, the masses of the people, be called Vaisyas, as in days of yore, and the menial servants only (there being no existence of the class of slaves now) be called Shudras. This will be in the spirit of the Shastras. But let no reformer give his countenance to the artificial hereditary caste which has sucked the life-blood out of the Hindu nation

The custom of enforced widowhood is observed chiefly by the higher castes, the lower castes of Hindus give the privilege of remarriage to their widows. This well-known custom in the Punjab is called Chaddardalna. There is no reason whatsoever, except vain pride, why the higher castes should not extend that privilege to their weaker sex. Its legality according to the Shastras has been fully proved. Moreover, all castes of Hindus allowed this privilege to their widows in the ancient ages, it was only

PREFACE.

In June 1900, Swami Shivanacharya visited Lahore, and at the request of friends, celebrated the Vyasapuja fair at his abode on the bank of the Ravi. Leading men of different sects and societies had attended the fair, where discourses were held and lectures delivered on the doctrines and beliefs of existing religious sects, under the presidency of Ram Tirtha Swami, who was elected Vyasa on the occasion.

Swami Shivanacharya has again visited Lahore this summer, after ten years. But he is about to adopt the life of a Muni. Therefore no Vyasapuja fair, like the last one, can be celebrated this time.

The Swamiji has, however, lately written his auto-biography full of practical lessons. It is in manuscript extending to 600 pages of large size. It will be duly published in parts. In the meantime I have thought it advisable to publish the following instructions as a Vyasapuja present and hope friends of religious tendencies will accept it and find it interesting and instructive and circulate it among deserving persons.

1. Instructions to the students of Barrielly College.
2.     ,,       to the members of the Imperial Cated Corps.
3.     ,,       to an American lady.
4.     ,,       to another American lady.
5.     ,,       to a Vaishnava Sadhu.
6.     ,,       to a Graduate.
7.     ,,       to a Pensioner.

SHANTI ASHRAM, LAHORE, } SHIVA NAND,
19th May, 1910.         } Manager.

Para 58 (b). Instructions to the students of the Barreilly College. India has been from the beginning of the world in possession of those eternal verities that make for spiritual and material progress. In the Satyuga, Treta, Dwapara and the greater part of Kaliyuga, the saints and sages of India have ministered to the religious wants of the world and the emperors of India ruled over the whole civilized world. In those glorious days of India, education, both spiritual and secular, was freely imparted to all the students according to their tastes and tendencies and the requirements of the people. There were Gurukulas and Ashramas and big centres of education in mountains and forests as well as in large cities, such as Kashi, Muthia, &c. Every temple and hermitage contained small Patshalas having their connection with a bigger centre. The students were taught on the broadest principle of love and affection, free from all pecuniary charges. But as there is nothing permanent in this world, where the Law of Change is ceaselessly working, the system of education, for various reasons, became obsolete and the country suffered. The British Government has now taken the education of the students into its own hands. But the education consists for the most part of the material education of the Head only. Until addition is made I would suggest you to read religious books at your leisure time and form some high and noble ideal for yourself.

Para 124. Instructions to the members of the Imperial Cadet Corps, Dehra Dun. However advanced one may be still there is room for improvement. The method of making progress in a particular line is to provide suitable means for the same. An ideal should be formed and steadily kept in view, for example, some great man himself a renowned leader in that particular line. I have dwelt in detail on this subject in the Sadharan Dharma book (which has since 1905 adopted as a moral text-book in the Raj Kumar Mayo College Ajmere). For your Highnesses the ideal of Sri Krishna, the master of practical statemanship, is highly to be recommended. As members of the corps your duty is to scorn luxury and live laborious boys and listen to the directions of your superiors as good boys do the injunctions of their Schoolmasters. If, along your military training, some arrangement be made for your education in the principles of Government, or lectureships on that subject be established in the existing institution, your training will reach a fair degree of completion. As rulers of the states, your duties and responsibilities are numerous as well as onerous. While on one hand you should make a proper use of your individual faculties, you must, on the other, endeavour to develop the resources of your states and make your subjects happy, contented and prosperous. In every town and village schools for boys as well as for girls should be established. Learning, wisdom and goodness should be respected with due regard to the interests of the state. Efforts should be directed not to let any man remain idle. Ever new industries and callings should be devised, so that all persons should be busy in one way or another and thus learn to gain their living by honest labour. Moreover, endeavours should be directed towards regulating the number of persons following particular callings; for it is not expedient that too many people should overcrowd one and the same business to the exclusion of the rest and depreciation of other professions. When you take the Government of your respective states into your hands, it would be your pleasant duty to diffuse at large the blessings of education among all sorts of people and then to keep them under control according to the rules of Dama, Sama, Danda and Bheda.

Para 126 (a). Upadesha to an American lady. India is the land of true wisdom and knowledge. The spiritual treasures of India surpass all the riches of the world. One of the mottos of Indian sages is "सत्यं वद, धर्मं चर" that is, speak the truth and follow the duty. Dharma is three-fold, viz., (1) Achara or duty to one's body and mind, i.e., the reading or hearing of religious books and practising daily the Vyayama, Pranayama and Dhyana exercises. (2) Uparahara or duty to the society, i.e., diffusing true knowledge among the people and helping the sick in body or mind. (3) Prayaschata or duty to one's Atma, i.e., devoting as much time as possible to go within and realize the in-most-self. What the Indian sages have known and realized by life-long experiences, is the truth that there is but one being in the universe, which being also constitutes the universe. This one being is Brahm or the universal soul, with which all the material substances are identified and into which all must be ultimately merged. This universal soul has often been compared to a bridge which cannot be crossed by the ignorant, the diseased and the selfish. On crossing this bridge, nights become days, forever refulgent is the region of the universal soul. Every one can realize this universal soul by developing the bodily, mental and moral powers and using them dis-interestedly for the good of humanity

Para 126 (b) I paduka to another American lady. Keep always your mind even and spirits cheerful. Every morning recite the sweet word "Om" the best name for your nameless self. Think and feel and realize the presence of Om within you. Then close your eyes and fix your attention in Trikut the focus of the eyes. Do it regularly and consciously. Ten minutes will be sufficient in the beginning, but increase the time gradually. After finishing this exercise, think calmly what work you have to do each day and do it cheerfully and resolutely. This will make you more and more happy, this will give you more and more consciousness and wonderful powers. Let each and every person know and do this

Para 279 Instructions to a Vaishnava Sadhu
You ought to get up as early as possible, but not later than 5 A.M. Having answered the calls of nature and taken your bath, spend at least one hour in taking bodily exercises and two hours in meditations. Mahrishi Manu says :

एकाकी चिंतयित्वा विविक्ते हृतयाजनः ।

एकाकी चिंतयानसि परं नैयोऽति गच्छति ॥

that is let him, in some secluded place, constantly meditate in the divine nature of the soul, for by such practice he will attain happiness. After meditation, you may recite the following prayer of the Yajur Veda from ten to hundred times according to your leisure

तेजोऽसि तेजो मयि धेहि । वीर्यमसि वीर्यं मयि धेहि ॥

बलमसि बलं मयि धेहि । शोकोऽस्योको मयि धेहि ॥

मन्युरसि मनहु मयि धेहि । सहोऽसि सहो मयि धेहि ॥

that is,

Thou art Light give me light

Thou art Energy put energy in me

Thou art Strength, give me strength

Thou art the source of Vitality give me vitality.

Thou art Anger, give me anger,

(i. e., indignation at wickedness).

Thou art Mercy, give me the quality of mercy or forbearance.

After reciting this prayer you may do some Paropakar with earnestness and sincerity. You may tell the people the sum total of Rishi Vyasa's teaching :

अष्टादशपुराणेन व्यासस्य वचनं इयम् ।

परमेश्वरः पुण्डरीकपादः परं पीठम् ॥

that is, there are only two sayings in the eighteen Puranas of Vyasa, viz., Paropakara or to do good to others is virtue and to do harm to others is vice.

Para 432 and following. Instructions to a graduate. If, as you say, you desire to tread in the footsteps of Ram Tirtha Swami, you must know what the world really is and enjoy it.

433. Make your body strong and pure by following the rules of Sharirak Dharma, senses, by Pranayama and heart by prayers. Make your mind independent and well balanced by observing Manasik Dharma and always rely on the infinite powers of your in-most-self.

434. Never be hasty in actions or speech. Never invite thoughts of grief or anxiety, fear or despondency. Never think of injuring any living being; for, behind the senses, the mind and the intellect (whether manifested or unmanifested) there is the omni-present God in every being, the same God as is in yours.

435. Make self-realization your chief ideal. Think of and do such work only as will intensify your desire to realize your ideal. Bear in mind that it is one thing to understand the ideal intellectually and quite another to assimilate the ideal in the daily performance of your work.

436. Observe continence. The highest sort of energy is stored up in the brain. It is called ojas in Sanskrit. A man's mental strength is in proportion to the quality of ojas in him. Sexual thoughts, words, or deeds must, as far as possible, be avoided. The more you control sexual energy, the more it will be converted into ojas.

437. Self-realization being the highest ideal, success can only be achieved by the greatest concentration of the mind. The more concentrated the mind is, the more power is attained to peep into the mysteries of nature as well as in your own divine self.

438. Learn to concentrate the mind as strongly as possible on one thought at a time. It will be found a very difficult process in the beginning, but you will achieve success by persistent efforts. When the mind is accustomed to dwell on one thought only, make endeavours to suppress that one thought also. By this practice you will find most original and sublime thoughts coming to your mind at your command.

439. Learn to detach yourself, as much as possible, from the connections of your lower-self, the body. The less we are attached to a thing, the less it has power to affect us; and if we are altogether non-attached to a thing, it cannot affect us at all. Keep constantly in view the following advice of Lord Sri Krishna:

“ कर्मस्वीदादि करस्वीमा फलेषु कदाचन ” । that is, work, but be not attached either to it or to its results.

440. You can work without attachment by thinking always that though seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, moving, breathing, in short, acting in any way, we virtually do not do any of these actions. It is the senses that are doing their functions among sense objects. We in reality are mere observers. The actions belong to the mind and body, which are parts of the universal nature and not ours. We are not nature but master of nature.

441. One doing a work with no attachment, that is to say, with no selfish motive, does only good and noble deeds beneficial to all humanity

442. By non-attachment one can defy the powers of outside things to act upon him and can preserve calmness of mind in all conditions. He can find ample time for meditation, contemplation and concentration, necessary to meet success in all material and spiritual pursuits of life. Following these instructions you may enter the world as a master and not a servant. The guiding principle of your life must be love for all. You must sincerely adore Ishwara and obey the laws of your sovereign, the incarnation of God in physical form. You must earn your livelihood by honest means and enjoy the world moderately and with discrimination. To satisfy the necessities of life is not evil, to obey the laws of Ishwara and Sovereign is a duty. The satisfaction of ones natural wants does not defile him. Eat and drink according to the necessities of your mind and body. Earnest and sincere endeavours to follow these instructions will make you a second Ram Tirtha

Swami You will yourself enjoy real happiness and will be a cause of happiness to those coming in contact with you. You will also fulfil the prophesy of Ram Tirath Swami which he uttered in a public meeting in the following words: " . . . O princes, priests and people of India 'can you conceive the state of affairs a few years hence? Call it odd and curious, yet I see before me a world of Swamis, gods walking on the face of the earth; clay-classifications of man swept away . . ." The graduates of religious tendencies, in these days, can well prove the world of Swamis. Should a hundred graduates, (or under graduates) like Ram Tirtha Swami and Vivekananda Swami, come forward, with a firm determination to undergo tapas, they would not only themselves enjoy eternal peace but also succeed in spiritualizing the whole universe.

Paras 471 and following. Instructions to a Pensioner. I am glad to know that you have desire to learn Divine knowledge. The first thing for you is to think yourself a master. You have been thinking yourself, for the last thirty years or so, a servant

472. To eradicate this Sanskara of servant, you must learn self-respect and self-control, that is, you must respect your higher self and control your lower self.

473 Thoughts like the following should always occupy your mind: - I am essentially divine. I am a part and parcel of the Omni-present and Almighty. I have uttered the holy name of Lord and realized it and therefore sin and sickness and weakness can not come to me. In all affairs dictate your own terms to your mind as a master and never be dictated upon by it.

474. Rouse your higher nature. Infinite strength is within you. Believe in this, and you will find yourself, day by day, higher and nobler. Changing the attitude of your mind in this way, you will be able to learn Divine knowledge successfully.

475. You must try to realize the one reality, which is called Brahma in Sanscrit. Realization of Brahma means oneness with it. You must give up personality and personal relations and all that tend to charm the senses.

476. Ponder well on the following couplet :

ہم مصبوط گھر عاقبت کا دار دنیا ہے
اوتھا لےنا یہاں سے اپنی دولت اور وہاں رکھنا

that is, more stable is the house of Aqibat or future state than that of Dunia or the present state. Put away your wealth from here and deposit it there.

477. Make over a portion of your wealth to your relations if they stand in need of it, and the rest to one or more charitable institutions. This is the right use of wealth, especially for an old man like yourself. The sages say that one who makes a good use of wealth possesses a great treasure ; but the miser who hoards up his riches will have no profit. Charity is rich in returns. Charity is the greatest wealth, for though it scatters, it brings no repentance.

478. For one desirous to learn Divine knowledge (Brahm-Vidya) it is most essential to give away his wealth and possessions in charity and live the calm and peaceful life of a hermit. Thus living, he must rely on the bountiful hand of Providence, which is bound to supply all his wants.

479. You must give up all hankerings of the world and the company of worldly-wise friends. Seek the company of spiritual personages and celestial beings. They will always extend their helping hand to you.

480. Sense-pleasures, in which you have been playing like a child up to this time, are transitory-joys of a moment which generally end in misery. You must turn your attention from them to realize your blissful state.

481. Real happiness comes not through the sense-pleasures, but through the knowledge of our Divine Self, which is beyond all conditions and changes, beyond all the powers within time, space and causation. You shall have to rend assunder the veil of Maya (Illusion) and stand forth radiant and glorious in your own Divine Self.

482. From the worldly point of view, even, you are an old man now. Sooner or later you shall have to depart from this world, leaving behind all your worldly connections and dear relations. Give them up voluntarily as all true devotees have done before you.

483. Says an illumined soul: "Life is short and uncertain and is rapidly passing. Each day, each hour, each minute brings us closer and closer to the end. Are we ready for the change? If not, we should strive to get ready without delay. If there is anything we can do to learn Divine knowledge, let us do it now."

484. Says another · "Everything is transient and nothing endures. The glory of the world is like a flower. It stands in full bloom in the morning and fades in the heat of the day. The world is full of changes and transformations, ye who long for life, know that immortality is hidden in transiency. Let all your energy be employed to unfold the fountain of immortality by knowledge. The possession of true knowledge is wealth. Knowledge portrays the Immutable. It reveals the Ever-lasting. It gives into mortals the boon of immortality . . ."

485. Ponder on well O Mr Judge! Be ready for the change, Lose no time in lingering. Otherwise Mighty Death will soon snatch you away from among all your worldly connections.

حان بھان دہ وگرہ از بو بسناد اہل
عہد بو منصف باش اے ہم ابن دکنہ آن دکنہ

That is, Give your life to the Beloved or Death will take it away. Judge yourself, O Judge, which is the better of the two.

486. The more one detaches himself from the sense-objects the more he comes to know that birth and death are alike composition from and de-composition into the same elements, according to the law of karma.

487. While the doing of a karma is transient, its form is permanent. The sight of an object, the thinking of an idea, the performance of an action, all these things pass away, but they leave behind their residua which endure. The products of a man's work in the outside world are of great importance, but more important still are the residua or traces that remain in his mind in the form of Sansakaras.

488. The character of a man consists of his Sansakaras, which are the products of his previous karmas. Each being is determined by its own karmas. It is karma which produces all differences and divisions.

489. Divine knowledge puts a stop to all the Sansakaras and Karmas and therefore to all the differences and divisions. You must try your utmost to acquire Divine knowledge. I believe that some of your good Sansakaras have brought you to my hermitage with an ardent desire to learn Brahm-Vidya. Take full advantage of your Sansakaras.

490. I am glad to notice that you possess a keen intellect and vast book-knowledge. But remember, that all religious books, including the Vedas are the shells, the bodies, the garments enveloping the Divine knowledge, which can only be known to the initiates. It shall be a pleasure to me to impart to you the un-concealed Divine knowledge (Brahm-Vidya) when you are initiated.

491. The saints and sages, custodians of Divine knowledge, say that all that has been, all that is, every thing that will be, and every thing that has ever been said is to be found in the Vedas, but the Vedas do not explain themselves. They can only be understood when the guru has removed the garment with which they are clothed and scattered the clouds that veil their celestial light

यस्य देवे परा भक्तिं यया देवे तथा गतौ ।

A few of Swami Shivgan Acharya's sayings.

- 1—The chief object of human life is to know and follow Dharma sincerely and earnestly
- 2—Dharma means the harmonious development and discriminate use of all power—physical, mental, moral and social.
- 3—The fruit of Dharma is health, wealth and prosperity in the present life and moksha or salvation hereafter
- 4—Dharma is divided into two parts—Purushartha and Propakara. To develop one's own powers is Purushartha. To help others in developing their powers is Propakara
- 5—It is the duty of every man and woman to know and follow Dharma and enjoy its fruits

Note—Swami Shivgan Acharya's address upto 15th July is c/o Manager, Shanti Ashrama and Editor Sat-Upadesha, Lahore and after that care of Manager, Shanti Ashrama, Mathra, U. P.

शुक्लयजुः अध्याय ८ मंत्र १३ इस श्रुति में देव मनुष्य और पितृशब्द पृथक् २ स्पष्ट विद्यमान हैं आर्याभिविनय में यहां भी बाबाजीने पूर्ववत् बनावट की है सो प्रत्यक्ष अयुक्त है उक्त श्रुति और दयानंदजीही के लेख से उनका वह सिद्धान्त भी कि पापविना भोगे कभी नहीं छूट सकते सर्वा मिथ्या होता है क्योंकि ईश्वरको पापों का नाशक स्पष्ट कहा है ॥

अग्निदेवता वातोदेवता सूर्योदेवता चन्द्रमा देवता वसवो देवता रुद्रादेवताऽऽदित्यादेवता मरुतोदेवता विश्वेदेवादेवता बृहस्पतिर्देवतेन्द्रो देवता वरुणोदेवता ॥ यजुः अध्याय १४ मंत्र २० इस श्रुति में अग्न्यादि देवता स्पष्ट लिखे हैं पूर्व भाष्यकारोंने हमारे अनुकूल ही व्याख्या की है परंतु बाबाजीने यजुर्वेद भाष्य में जो कुछ क-

पोल कल्पना की है उसको जो कोई बुद्धिमान् देखेगा अवश्य असमंजस कहैगा—‘द्वेष्टृतीऽअ-
श्रुण्वंपितृणामहं देवानामुत्तमर्त्यानाम्’ यजुः अ-
ध्याय १९ मंत्र ४७ आशय यह है कि धर्म निष्ठ
मनुष्योंकी मरणानंतर पितृयान और देवयान
दोगति हैं यह श्रुति बृहदारण्यक उपनिषत् में
भी आई है वहां शंकराचार्य आदिने सम्यक्
व्याख्या की है सज्जनलोक अवलोकन करें द-
यानंदजी की व्याख्या सबके विरुद्ध है अतएव
सर्वथा अशुद्ध है ।

यजुः अध्याय २४ मंत्र ४ के पदार्थ में दया-
नंदजीहिने वायुदेवता, सरस्वतीदेवता, त्वष्टादेव-
ता और उषादेवता लिखा है मंत्र १५ के पदार्थ
में इन्द्र और अग्नि देवता, वरुणदेवता और प्र-
जापति देवता है मंत्र १७ के पदार्थ में महेन्द्रदे-

बता, विश्वकर्मदेवता लिखा है यदि देवता मनुष्योंसे पृथक् नहीं तो क्या उक्तनाम किन्हीं विद्वानोंके हैं यदि कोई ऐसाही स्वीकार करे तो सत्यार्थप्रकाश मुद्रित सन् १८८४ के पृष्ठ २०५ का वह लेख कि किसी मनुष्यकी संज्ञा वेदों में नहीं मिथ्या ठहरेगा फिर यजुः अध्याय २९ मंत्र १४ के पदार्थ में ऋषि देव पितृ लिखा है यदि कोई महाशय यहां भी देवशब्दका अर्थ विद्वान् करेंगे तो क्या ऋषि शब्द अविद्वान् का वाचक कहेंगे धन्य ।

यजुः अध्याय ३० मंत्र १२ के मूलमें देवलोक और मनुष्यलोक आया है यद्यपि वावाजीने इस श्रुतिके अर्थमें भी सर्वथा अनर्थ किया है परंतु जिसको कुछभी बुद्धि होगी श्रुतिमें स्पष्ट देवलोक और मनुष्यलोक देखकर यही कहे-

गा कि देवलोक मनुष्यलोकसे पृथक् है अतएव देवता मनुष्योंसे निःसंदेह भिन्न हैं यजुः अध्याय ३१ मंत्र ६ 'तं यज्ञं वहिषि प्रोक्षन्पुरुषं जातमग्रतः । तेन देवा अयजन्त साध्या ऋषयश्च ये' इस श्रुतिमें देव साध्य ऋषिः स्पष्ट हैं वावाजीने यहां भी बनावट की है उसे बुद्धिमान् आप समझ सकते हैं ।

यजुः अध्याय ३३ मंत्र ६० के पदार्थ में (अमृताः) आत्म स्वरूपसे मरण धर्म रहित (देवाः) विद्वान् लोग दयानंदजीने ऐसा लिखा है परंतु आत्म स्वरूपसे तो मूर्ख तथा पशु पक्षी भी मरण धर्म रहित हैं फिर यह उपमा विद्वानों ही के लिये क्यों वस्तुतः देवता मनुष्योंसे पृथक् हैं और मनुष्योंसे उनमें यह विशेषता है कि वे मरण धर्म रहित हैं श्रुतिमें देवाः पदका अमृताः

विशेषण है शेष बाबा जी की बनावट ।

‘अथर्ववेदे देवाः पितरो मनुष्या गन्धर्वाप्स
रसक्षये’ इस श्रुतिमें देव पितर मनुष्य और
गंधर्व प्रत्यक्ष लिखे हैं नमानने और झूठी ब-
नावट करनेवालोंकी ओषधि हमारे पास नहीं
फिर अथर्ववेदमें है ब्रह्मचर्येण तपसा देवामृत्यु

अर्थात् ब्रह्मचर्य और तप करके देवताओंने मृ-

करना चाहिये कि जब श्रुति में माता पिता और
आचार्यको देवताके समान उपास्य कहा है यदि
यहां देवता पदसे विद्वान्का ग्रहण करें तो आचार्य
की क्या महिमा हुई क्योंकि आचार्य मूर्खता होता
ही नहीं किंतु आचार्य पदका अधिकारी परम
विद्वान् होता है जबकि वह परम विद्वान् है और
अन्य विद्वानों हीके समान माना गया तो उस
का आचार्य पद निष्फल हुआ इससे यही बात
सिद्ध हुई कि देवता मनुष्यों से पृथक् उच्चपदा-

यहां एक स्त्री गुड़ और दही लेकर आई उसने उस देवताकी पूजाकी और मुझको भूलसे देवता समझकर उसने कहा कि आप इसे स्वीकार कीजिये—

यहां दयानन्दजी ने शिवके वाहन नन्दीगण को देवता माना है यदि विद्वान् मनुष्यको देवता मानते तो यह कभी न कहते कि उसने मुझको भूलसे देवतासमझकर कहा क्योंकिवे अपने लिये मूर्ख तो जानतेही न थे किंतु विद्वान् ही मानते थे ॥

❀ धर्मसन्ताप ❀

आगया अब घोर कालियुग, धर्म को सन्ताप है ।
पुण्य का अकुर मिटा, विकसित जहां तहां पाप है ॥
नाम तो सत्यार्थ है, और उस में मिथ्या लाप है ।
हाय ! विद्वानों ने भी, स्वीकार की चुप चाप है ॥ १ ॥
पूर्व ऋषि मुनियों ने जो कुछ, धर्म का निर्णय किया ।
कालियुग के अज्ञों ने उसे, मिथ्या ही मिथ्या कह दिया ।
सत्य को विध्वंस करके, क्या खलोंने यज्ञ लिया ।
जिसने बढ़ाया असत्को, चिरकाल बह फिर नहीं जिया ॥ २ ॥
सृष्टि के आरम्भ में, ब्रह्मा हुए विख्यात है ।
विदे ब्राह्मण उपनिषत्, इतिहास में यह बात है ॥
अग्नि वायु की कथा, स्वामी जी का उत्पात है ।
अज्ञता उनकी है इस में, या कोई यह घात है ॥ ३ ॥
एक स्त्री को लिखा, दश मर्द से करना नियोग ।

३ वेदद्वार प्रकाश देखो ॥

गर्भिणी भी पर पुरुष से, चाहे तो भोगे ये भोग ।
 हो पति परदेश में, स्त्री करे औरों से योग ।
 स्वामी जी की बुद्धि पर, रोंबे न क्यों विद्वान लोग ॥ ४ ॥
 होम करना मांससे, देखो लिखा सत्यार्थ में ।
 और गो बध की लिखा है, आज्ञा सत्यार्थ में ॥
 मांस भक्षण की भी की, पुष्टि बृथा सत्यार्थ में ।
 देखले अपने गुरु की, अज्ञता सत्यार्थ में ॥ ५ ॥
 मांस भोजन की हो पुष्टि, है मवल कलिका प्रताप ।
 लोप है मन्त्रम का, और मकट है सर्वत्र पाप ॥
 सज्जनों के हृदय में, अष्ट प्रहर है येही ताप ।
 आर्य कहलाकर करें हैं, धर्म का क्यों नाश आप ॥ ६ ॥
 सब मनुज सब देश में स्त्री ग्रहण का है विचार ।
 वर्णसंकर होगया, वर्जित नहीं भंगी चमार ॥
 ऐसे उपदेशों से बतलाओ, तो क्या होगा सुधार ।
 नास्त्य वैदिक धर्मका, तुमने किया है सब प्रकार ॥ ७ ॥

आध मन धी से मृतक का, लिखत है वह दाह कर्म ।
 और नहीं तो डालना, सुरदे का है जंगल में धर्म ॥
 चील कउवे खाँगे, हा ! आर्यों का मांस चर्म ।
 बुद्धिमानोंको तो ऐसा, कहने से आनी है शर्म ॥ ८ ॥
 भस्म को सुरदे की, बाग और खेतमें डलवाइये ।
 खात माता और पिता के, पिण्ड का बनवाइये ॥
 वेद में यह कहाँ लिखा है, हम को भी बतलाइये ।
 जो नहीं पावे, तो अपने मन में ही भरमाइये ॥ ९ ॥
 वेद के अतिरिक्त पुस्तक, मत्व जो नहीं जानते ।
 तो दिखावे वेद में, हमको जो है वे मानते ।
 मत्व तो यह है, कि जो नहीं मत् असत् पहिचानने ।
 धर्म के विपरीत सब से, युद्ध है वे ठानते ॥ १० ॥
 वेदमें है किम जगह, दिखलाये सोलह संस्कार ।
 मिद्धकर मम्यक चहें, तूने लिखा है जिस प्रकार ॥
 भंडिताओं ही से कर, वल्लिवत्सन्ध्या का विचार ।
 मन्यकी जय है सदा, दुष्ट की है सर्वत्र हार ॥ ११ ॥
 नाम त्रिमू कन्या काहो, पर्वत नदी या वृक्ष पर ।

८ पहिली संस्कारविधि पृष्ठ १४१

९ शाली संस्कार विधि पृष्ठ १५०

त्याग उसका क्यों लिखा, स्वामी ने तेरे बुद्धि चर ॥
 वेद की आज्ञा है ऐसी, या है इस में युक्ति तर ।
 क्या बुराई उस में आई, कहिये तो कुछ सोचकर ॥ १२ ॥
 वेद में जो सर्व सम्मत ही, तुझे स्वीकार है ।
 तो कुरान इजील तुझ का, वेद के अनुसार है ॥
 मत तेरा बस नास्तिकता, का प्रकट भण्डार है ।
 जो कोई ऐसा कहे, वह बुद्ध का अवतार है ॥ १३ ॥
 भूमिका में है तेरी, वेदात्पत्ति का प्रकार ।
 फिर कहा उनको अनार्द्र, बस इमी पर कर विचार ॥
 स्वामी जी की बुद्धि पर, छाया था कैसा अन्धकार ।
 कुछ विरोध उन को न मृज्ञा, अज्ञता की रथामार ॥ १४ ॥
 शूद्र के सुत में जो होवे, कर्म उत्तम वर्ण का ।
 आर उत्तम वर्ण का सुत, शूद्र सम हो वे पदा ॥
 उनका हो बदला ये है, स्वामी की तेरे आज्ञा ।
 मोचल मन में कि आयेगी, विपत्ति इससे क्या ॥ १५ ॥
 आचमन कफ पित्त की, शान्ति को बतलाई दवा ।
 मांजन से नष्ट हो, भय नींद अरु आलस्य का ॥

हो न केशों का पतन, है इस लिखे बन्धन शिखा ।
 बाढ़ क्या तेरे मुरु ने, की है अमृत व्याख्या ॥ १६ ॥
 होम का कल वायु शुद्धि, स्वामी ने तेरे लिखा ।
 सत्य है उसका कथन, तो मन्त्र पढ़ना है वृथा ।
 सोच तो बलिबैश्व का, ठट्ठा उड़ाया उसने क्या,
 लोप सत्कर्मों का बम, करना उसे स्वीकार था ॥ १७ ॥
 पाप बिन भोगे नहीं छुटता, है यह कहना अशुद्ध ।
 हैं बचन उन के ही ग्रन्थों में, अनेक इस के निकुट ॥
 सत्य के निर्णय की हो इच्छा, तो कीजे वाक युद्ध ।
 लेख को क्यों देखकर, मेरे वृथा होता है कुट्ट ॥ १८ ॥
 पहले सब ग्रन्थों में अपने, मुक्ति मुख अक्षय लिखा ।
 छागया अज्ञान तब, गाने लगे उलटी कथा ॥
 शुभ अशुभ कर्मों का जिनके, नाश सम्यक् होचका ।
 क्यों उन्हें बन्धन में डालेगा, पुनः परमात्मा ॥ १९ ॥
 जेलखाना और फांसी सम, लिखा मुक्ति को हा !
 नास्तिकता इस से बढ़कर, और बनलाओ है क्या ॥

 तो शिखा छेदन की दी, क्यों आवही ने आज्ञा ॥
 सब के उपवासों को जब, सत्यार्थ में झूठा कहा ।
 क्यों लिखे उपनयन में, उपवास फिरतूने बता ॥ २१ ॥
 शूद्र तक को तां नमस्ते, का कथन स्वीकार है ।
 और नमःशिव के लिये, कहना बुरा आचार है ॥
 स्वामी जी महाराज का, प्रत्यक्ष वाम विचार है ॥

विज्ञापन ।

आजकल अपने और दूसरे के ग्रन्थों का सत्य झूठ बातों
 का यथावत् निर्णय किये बिनाही प्राय लोग दयानंदा
 समाजों में प्रविष्ट होकर सत्ययनातनधर्म को समूह
 नष्टभ्रष्ट कर रहे हैं यद्यपि ये लोग विद्वानों के सम्मुख सर्वत्र
 पराजय की प्राप्त होतें हैं परंतु अज्ञों को अपने बाकूजाल
 में फाँसकर धर्म की बड़ी हानि करते हैं अतएव इन

लोगों से अपने धर्म की रक्षा चाहनेवाले सत्पुरुषों को मेरेविचारमें यह उपाय करना आवश्यक है, कि दयानंद के ग्रन्थों को शास्त्र विरुद्ध झूठी बातोंको सम्पूर्ण हिन्दुओं पर सम्यक् प्रकट कर दें जिस से कोई सनातनधर्मावलम्बी अपने श्रेष्ठ मत से विमुख न होवै और उनलोगों की झूठीबातों का यथोचित उत्तर दे सकें हमने चिरकाल से इसीहेतु दयानंद के खण्डन की प्रायः छेटी २ पुस्तकें मुद्रित कराई, कि सब लोग दयानंद के शास्त्र-विरुद्ध और महाअशुद्ध लेखोंको जानजावें जिससे फिर कोईअपने मत को त्यागकर उनकी झूठी बातोंमें न फँसे यदि सम्पूर्ण धर्मसभाओं के मंत्री वा मभासद तथा और धनी धर्मात्मा लोग दो दो चार चार रुपये की पुस्तकें भेगाकर अपने २ नगर में फहलाते तो अवश्य कुछ न कुछ लाभ होता परन्तु किसीने इधर ध्यान ही न किया उक्त पुस्तकों के छपाने में हमारा प्रयोजन धन कमाना नहीं है किन्तु मुख्य तात्पर्य यही है, कि सब लोग सन्यासत्य का यथार्थ निर्णय करके मत्शास्त्रानुसार मतको स्वीकार और प्रतिकूल का तिरस्कार करें इसी कारण हम समस्त धर्म रक्षक महाशयों की सेवा में निवेदन करते हैं, कि जो महाशय हमारे नीचे लिखे हुए पुस्तकों में से जिस

पुस्तक को चाहें आप छपवावें और जहां तहां फहलावें धर्मसभाओं में सैकड़ों रुपया वार्षिकोत्सवों में निष्फल उठता है धनी लोग सहस्रों रुपया विवाहादि उत्सवों में वृथा उड़ाते हैं यदि वे महाशय दत्त दत्त बीस २० रुपये की इस प्रकार की पुस्तकें आप मुद्रित कराके वा हम से भेगाकर बांट दिया करें तो अतिलम्ब हो सिद्धान्त यही है, कि दयानन्द स्वर्णन की छोटी २ पुस्तकों का नगर २ में प्रत्येक मनुष्य को देखना और अपने पुत्र पौत्रादि को पढ़ाकर सम्यक् समझा देना अत्यावश्यक है यदि हमको बीस सज्जन पुरुष ऐसे धर्म-रक्षक उदार मिलजावें, कि हम जो पुस्तक आगे को मुद्रित करावें वे महाशय उस की पचास ५० प्रति लेखवें तो हम छपाने में एक मास के भीतर लागत के अनुसार मूल्य पर देदेवेंगे सम्पूर्ण धर्मसभाओं तथा धर्मरक्षक सत्पुरुषों को चाड़िये, कि इन पुस्तकों को आप छपवा कर वा हम से भेगाकर सर्वत्र फहलावें धर्म को बढ़ावें और अधर्म को हटावें ॥ प्रायः स्थानों में सुमन्मान लोग सत्यसनातनधर्मपर मिथ्याभासप करके अज्ञ लोगों को बहकाने हैं उन के स्वर्णन में श्री मत्सुंशी इन्द्र-मणी विरचित किताबों का फहलाना उपकारी है. इति ॥

नष्ट होजायें । पृष्ठ ३०३ जहां २ गोमेधादिक लिखेहैं वहां २ पशुओं मे नरोंका मारना लिखाहै-और एक बैलसे हजारहां गया गर्भवती होती हैं इससे हानिभी नहीं होती- और जो बध्या गाय होती है उसको भी गोमेध मे मारना लिखाहै- क्योंकि बध्या मे दुग्ध और वत्सादिकों की उत्पत्ति नहीं हानती । पृष्ठ ३०९ पशुओं को मारने में थोड़ासा दुःखहोता है परन्तु यज्ञ मे चराचर का अत्यन्त उपकार होता है ॥

ऋग्वेदादि भाष्य भूमिका पृष्ठ २१४ विवाहित पतिके मरने वा रोगी होनेमे दूसरे पुरुष वा स्त्रीके साथ संतानोंके अभाव मे नियोग करे तथा दूसरे को भी मरण वा रोगी होने के अनन्तर तीसरे के साथ करले इसी प्रकार दशवे तक करने की आज्ञा है इसीप्रकार पुरुष के लिये भी विवाहित स्त्रीके मरजाने पर विधवा के साथ नियोग करनेकी आज्ञाहै और जब वहभी रोगी हो वा मरजाय तो सन्तानोत्पत्तिके लिये दशम स्त्री पर्यन्त नियोग करनेवे दूसरीवारके छपे सत्यार्थ प्रकाश का पृष्ठ २६ श्रीगणेशायनमः ०००० शिवायनमः सरस्वत्यैनमः नारायणायनमः इत्यादिको वेदविरुद्ध और मिथ्या लिखा इससे पूर्व उक्तनामोंको परमात्माके नाम सिद्ध किया पृष्ठ ८८ मुखादि अंगोंसे ब्राह्मणादि उत्पन्न होतेसो

उपादान कारण के सदृश ब्राह्मणादि की आकृति गोलमान्
 बुद्धाकृति के समान होती यह लेख महाभरताका है पृष्ठ ८९.
 ब्राह्मण क्षत्रिय वैश्य और शूद्रों की कन्याओं की सालहवे
 वर्ष और पुरुषों की पच्चीसवें वर्ष विद्या मभा मे परीक्षा
 होकर जो लड़के लड़की गुणकर्मानुसार जिस वर्ण के योग्य हो
 उस २ से बदला दिये जावे और गुणकर्मानुसार ही उनके
 विवाह हों धन्य ! भला विवाहानन्तर स्त्री पुरुषों के गुण कर्म
 अन्यवर्ण के योग्य होजावे तो क्या किया जावे ! पृष्ठ ०३
 विवाह के निमित्त कन्या और कुमारों के फोटो तथा जन्म
 चरित्र कन्याओंकी अध्यापिका और कुमारों के अध्यापकों
 के पास भेजे जावेगे जिनके गुण कर्म स्वभावानुसार जिस
 के साथ जिस २ का विवाह होना योग्य समझे उस पुरुष
 और कन्या का प्रानेविम्ब और इतिहास कन्या और वरके
 हाथ मे टेवे और कहे कि इसमें जो तुम्हारा अभिप्राय हो सो
 हमको विदित करदेना जब उन दोनों का निश्चय परस्पर
 विवाह करने का होजाय ००० जो वे दोनों अध्यापकों के
 सामने विवाह करना चाहें तो वहां, नहीं तो कन्याके माता
 पिताके घरमें विवाह होना योग्य है ००० भद्र पुरुषों के
 सामने उन दोनों की आपस में बातचीत शास्त्रार्थ कराना

दिन उपवास करने की विधि की पृष्ठ ३४९ ३५० नमः शिवाय इस मंत्र का उपदेश करने वालों को वाममार्गियों के समान निंदित लिखा और यह मंत्र यजुर्वेद में प्रत्यक्ष है ।

सम्बत् १९३३ की छपी संस्कार विधि पृष्ठ ११ जो चाहे कि मेरा पुत्र पंडित, सदसाद्विवेकी, शत्रुओं को जीतने वाला स्वयं जीतने में न आने वाला, युद्ध में गमन हर्ष और निर्भयता करनेवाला, शिक्षित वाणी का बोलने वाला, सब वेद वेदाङ्ग विद्या का पढ़ने और पढ़ाने तथा सर्वायु का भोगने वाला होय वह मांस युक्त भान को पकाकर पूर्वोक्त घृतयुक्त खा य । पृष्ठ ४२ अजा के मांस का भोजन अन्नादि की इच्छा करने वाला तथा विद्या कामना के लिये तित्तिर का मांस भोजन करावे । पृष्ठ ४८ कर्णवेध अलंकार धारण के लिये कान को विधना । पृष्ठ १४१ मृतक के शरीर प्रमाणों बराबर घी और कर्पूर चन्दनादि सुगन्ध साथ लेले—न्यून से न्यून बीस सेर घी अवश्य होना चाहिये इतना भी घृतादि न होय तो न गाड़े न जल में छोड़े और न दाह करे किंतु दूर जाके जंगल में छोड़ आवे । पृष्ठ १५० मृतक के भस्म और अस्थि को भूमि में गाड़ देवे अथवा बाग वा खेत में डाल देवे । उन के ग्रंथों में प्रायः ऐसे ही शास्त्र तथा लोक विरुद्ध लेख भरे हैं

जिन से स्पष्ट प्रकट होता है कि दयानन्दसरस्वती सर्वथा वैदिक धर्म कर्म को नष्ट और जगत् को भ्रष्ट ही करना चाहता था--उसने होम का फल वायुशुद्धि । संध्या में शिखाबंधन का प्रयोजन वाल न बिखरना, तथा आचमन से कफ पित्त की शांति, मार्जन से निद्रा और आलस्य का दूर होना, यही आशय लिखा है ऐसे लेखों से उसका आन्तरीय अभिप्राय यही जाना जाता है कि लोग इन कर्मों को निरर्थक जानकर छोड़देवें । वह स्वर्ग नरक और देवताओं को भी नहीं मानता उसने अज्ञों को जाल में फांसने के निमित्त बड़ा भारी झल कपट यह किया है कि अपने ग्रंथों में प्रायः वेदादि सत्शास्त्रों के वचन लिखकर उनका भाषार्थ सर्वथा मन माना स्वकपोल कल्पित शास्त्र विरुद्ध लिखदिया है चारों वेदों की ११३१ शाखाओं में से केवल चार संहिताओं ही का मंतव्य बताया ऋषि मुनियों के ग्रंथों में वेदविरुद्ध होने का झूठा दोष लगाया भागवतादि पुराणों पर मिथ्या आक्षेप किये उनके नाम से स्वेच्छानुकूल निज कपोलकल्पित इतिहास लिख दिये । मुक्ति को जेलखाना और फांसी के समान ठहराया श्री वेदव्यास महर्षि के वचन को वेदविरुद्ध बतलाया अपने परस्पर विरुद्ध लेखों पर ध्यान न था सम्भव और असंभव का ज्ञान न
